Starting Over

From This Point On

The presence of construction seems to be one of the only constants for Thomas Worthington's everchanging campus.

The 1991-92 school year was perhaps the most widely anticipated school year in Cardinal history. The anticipation began two years ago when plans to construct a second high school, and thus to divide the student body, were announced. Soon, the construction of a second high school, or the "split", was the overwhelming favorite subject of intense debates, articles, and in keeping in Cardinal tradition, committees. Expert opinions on the future of the two schools were a dime a dozen, and graciously offered to the unenlightened majority at will. Now, after two years of theories and articles of impending doom, the split is a reality, leaving some to wonder, what was all the fuss about? This year, in all actuality, has certainly been a year of firsts. It has brought Thomas Worthington a new slew of rules and regulations, a newly-renovated campus, and a new reputation to live down, the hypothetical reputation of Thomas Worthington as a second-rate school.

When the plans to divide the powerful Worthington High School into two schools were originally announced, public opinion as well, was divided. Those in favor cited primarily the problem of overcrowding in classrooms and hallways as just cause to split. Those opposed pointed out the inevitable weakening and classification of the two schools as second-rate schools, at least for a while. They feared that years would pass before athletic teams would have the potential to win a state victory. Academically, the once abundant course selection would be reduced, because the class size to command such selection would not be present. Emotionally, it was unfair to divide the students, especially the highly vocal class of '92.

The reality of the split has validated some predictions while proving others to be premature. The Boys' Varsity Soccer Team clinched the state title, a sweet victory not only for the soccer team, but for the student body as well. In addition, the typically strong Girls' Cross Country Team finished their season with 118 wins and only one loss, capturing the title of State Runner-Up. Select members of the debate team have reached the state level, while the play, To Be Young Gifted and Black, received a superior rating on the state level competition, giving Thomas Worthington yet another reason to ring the Victory Bell.

In addition, the widespread controversy over the splitting of the student body seems to have died down. Students vehemently opposed to the splitting of their senior class were some of the same students who failed to vote on whether or not graduation should be joint or separate. All in all, the split, initially so controversial, seemed to arrive quietly, and became overshadowed by bigger and better controversies.

The student body has, once again, demonstrated its ability to adapt. This is a student body which has spent virtually its entire educational career amidst constant change. They accepted the splitting of their classes, as well as the possibility of being considered a second-rate school. In all situations, the students have emerged victorious. It appears that amongst all the debating and articles, the ability of the students to overcome was overlooked. The experts theorized as to the effect of the split on the student body, as if it were composed of inert specimens. What will the split do to these students? Will they recover? Thomas Worthington rallied to the cause to emerge as victors, with an eternal spirit unaffected by factors with the potential to suppress it. The future can only be bright, as we've started over with a clean slate of moral victories. We can only move forward, from this point on.

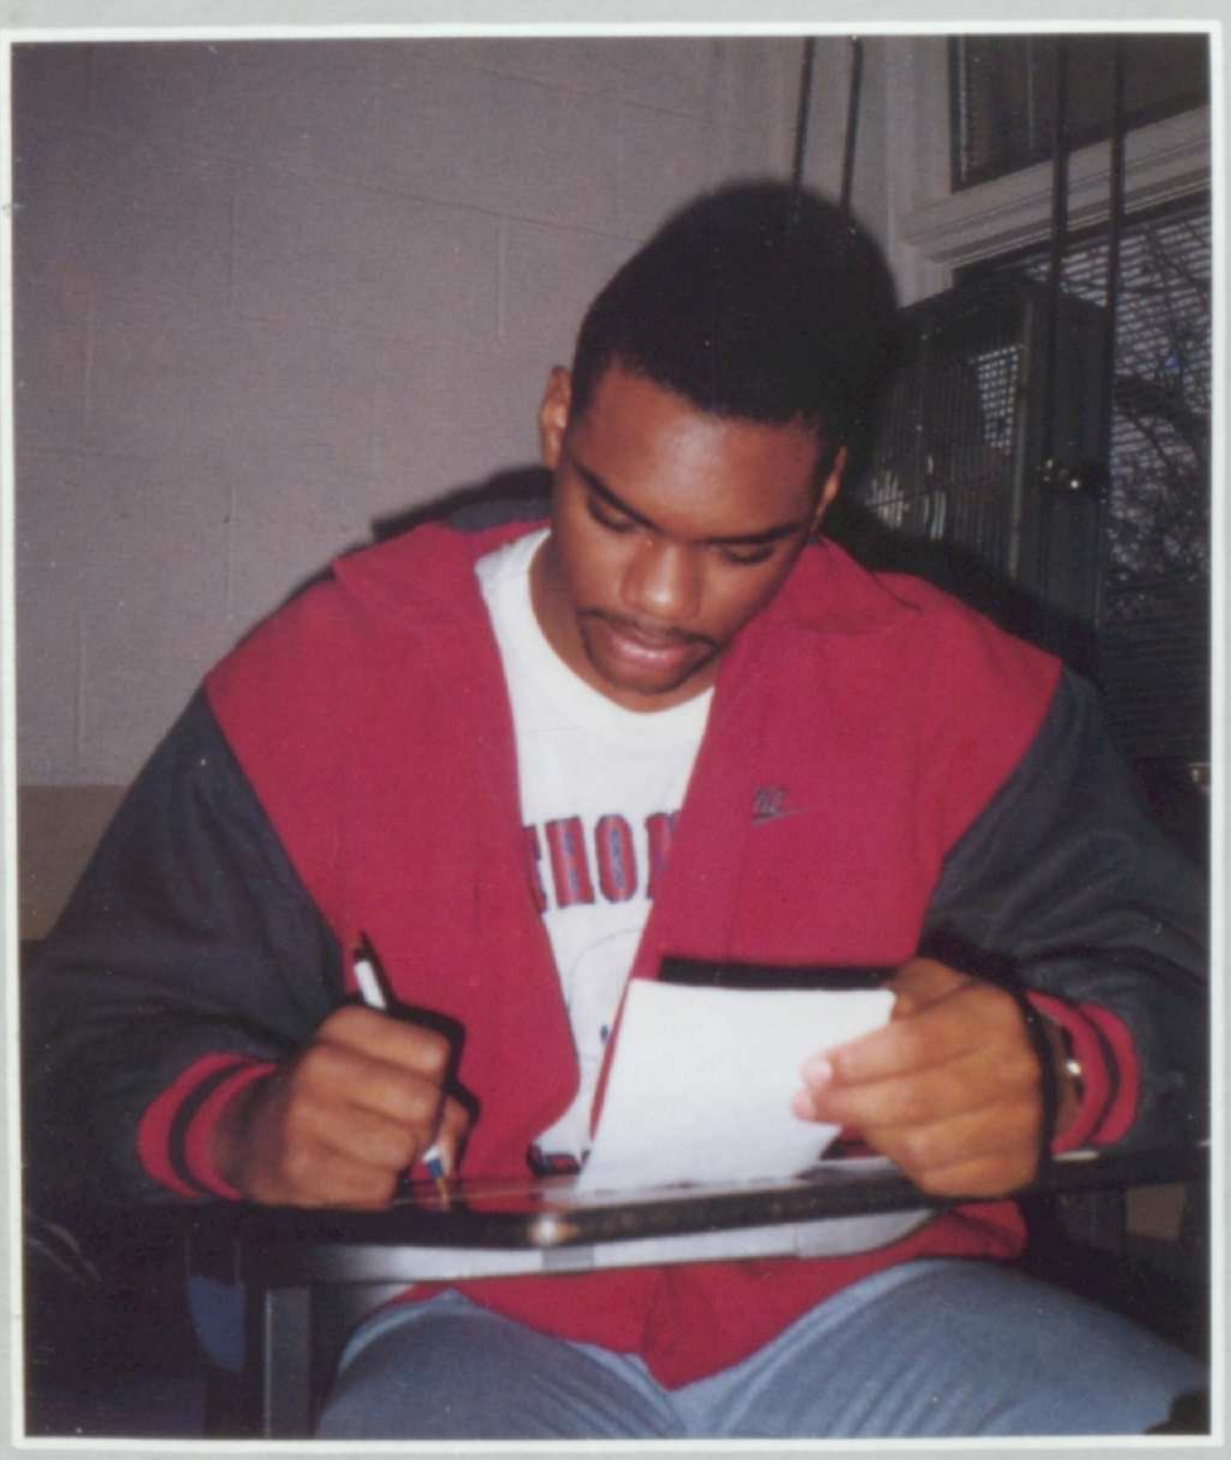
Not even the intense heat of the sun beating down can distract Jeff Bashore as he heralds in a new school year, the first ever for Thomas Worthington.



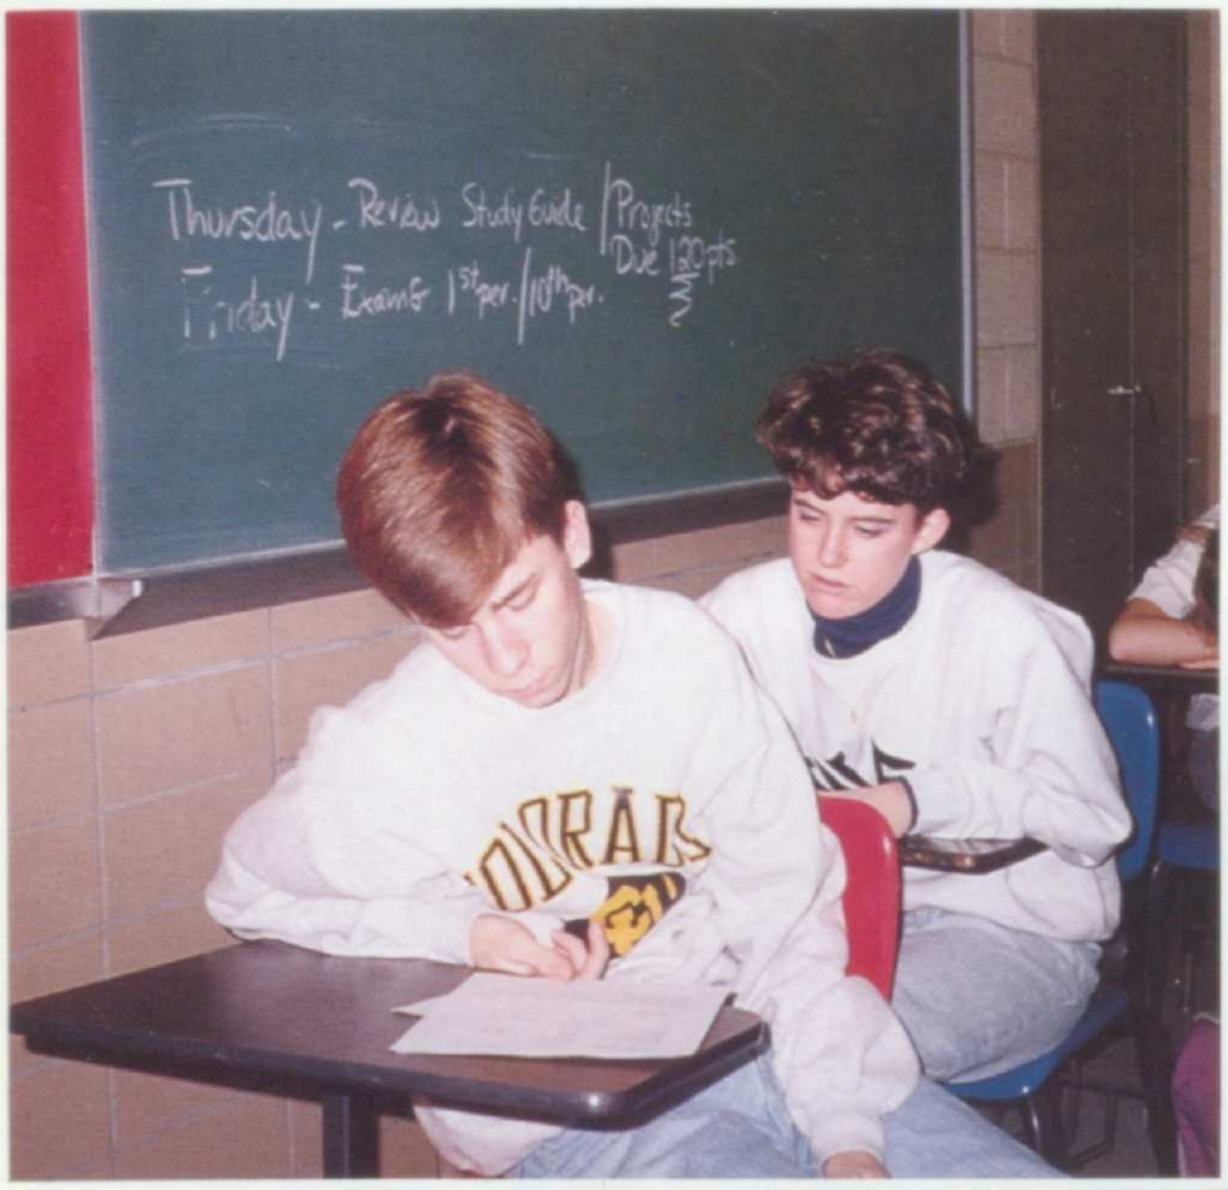
Any fears of athletic inferiority as a result of the split were quickly silenced by a Boys' Varsity Soccer State victory.

Though few students are aware of the significance and origins of the Victory Bell, it stands as a constant reminder of class and tradition.

Too involved in his studies to even look up, Senior Qwann Wood demonstrates why Worthington's tradition of academic excellence continues to be a top priority after the split.

Academics

A Tradition Of Excellence



"Students clearly were striving to become the best."

Worthington is proud of its reputation for academic excellence. This status has remained true even through the division into two high schools, Thomas Worthington and Worthington Kilbourne. Here at Thomas Worthington High School, quotations such as 'The best get better,' and 'Where excellence is a tradition,' define the scholastic attitude of the students.

This pursuit to achieve the best has been assisted by the numerous academic opportunities at TWHS. With a new ten-period day, including five half-hour lunch periods, most students had spare time on their hands. A popular hangout, other than study hall, was the famed academic assistants' office where help was offered in the Science, Math, History, and English subjects. Another stamping ground was the computer lab. Seniors could be frequently found there battling out tedious college essays around deadline time. Finally, for the future Whitmans and Hemingways, the Write Place gave advice to students in penmanship and prose. These academic opportunities were made available to encourage student's success in troublesome subjects, and to aid the quest of personal excellence.

With the split, arrived a new, even stronger academic motivation for TWHS. Students clearly were striving to become the best. Many people view this atmosphere as highly competitive. This competition was never more observable than in the class of 1992. Seniors placed much priority on their Grade Point Average(GPA) and aptitude test scores. This emphasis may be common behavior for high school seniors, but for the TWHS Senior class, academic performance created great concern.

During the 1990-91 school year, when the then-Junior class was allowed to choose between TWHS or WKHS, the majority chose to finish their career at TWHS. As it turned out, twenty-four of the original twenty-six 4.0 GPA students remained at TWHS, as did all eleven National Merit Semifinalists. This lopsided effect created numerous unanticipated problems for the class. The most critical of these problems was the fall in class ranks. The drop meant that some students were then ineligible for various monetary scholarships, or even college acceptances. Feeling frustrated and infuriated by the split's consequence pushed a few students to express their views and concerns to the local newspapers. Realizing how upset the students were, Superintendent Damon Asbury and Principal William Northrup, wrote letters to every college and university the class had applied to, explaining the circumstances surrounding the split. With the completed college application packets, counselors added another letter stating the pre- and post-split class ranks. Fortunately, most colleges and universities understood the split's effects, which helped ease some of the worries of the Senior class.

To reward the great academic motivation of TWHS students, many honors and awards were offered. The Honor Roll, with its three categories; Cardinal (4.0 and above), Blue (3.50-3.99), and Red (3.00- 3.49), was undoubtedly the most recognized. Students were also nominated by teachers and staff, for qualities such as leadership, endurance, general positivity, and for recognition programs like the Breakfast Club, Outstanding Students in English, and Students of the Month. For some of these awards, recognition included having their picture displayed in a showcase. In essence, rewarding the students for their achievements helped to promote the academic motivation and drive at TWHS.

Many changes have occurred from the division into two high schools. There have been various obstacles to overcome. At TWHS though, one thing has not changed, the determination to achieve excellence.

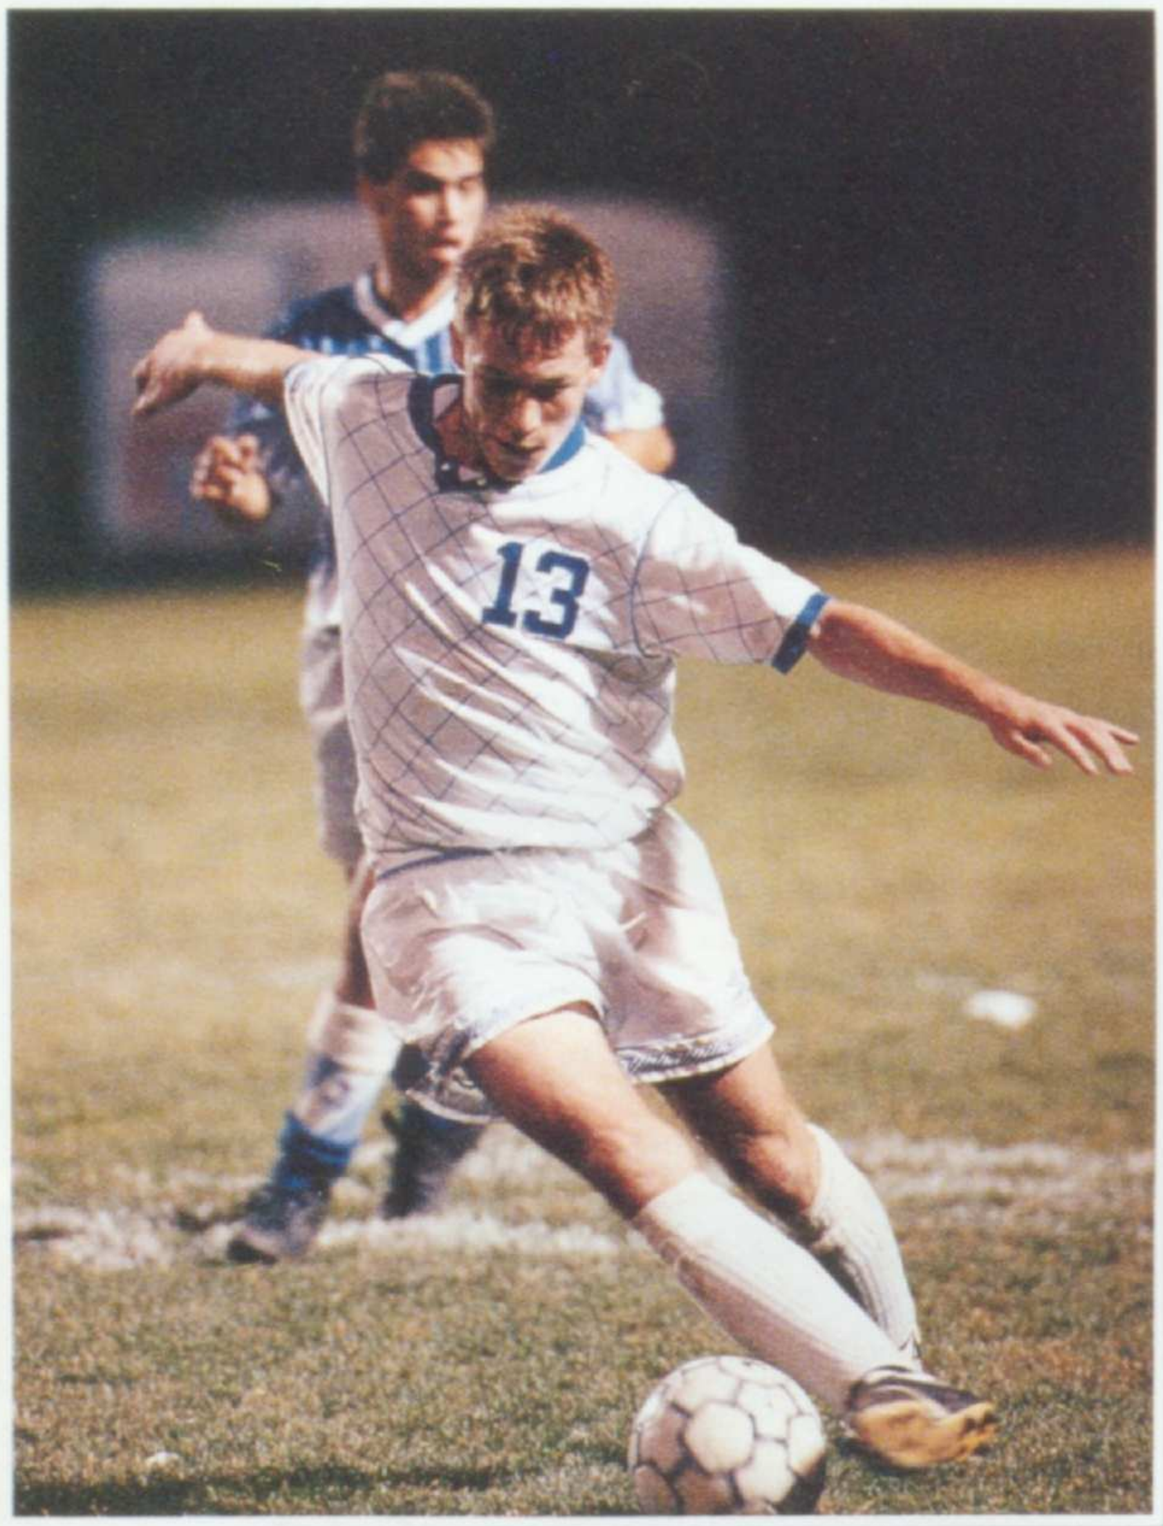
Settling Unfinished Business



"It was what we worked for the entire year."

-Nathan Fairchild

All season the Boys' Varsity Soccer team said they had to take care of some "unfinished business". What exactly was this unfinished business? It happened to be the State Championship.

Last year the boys were eliminated in the district finals by Westerville North. It was a hard fought battle which continued through an overtime, a sudden death, and a shoot-out. Unfortunately, the Cardinals fell to the Warriors 2-3. This tough loss instigated the need to resolve some "unfinished business".

This season proved much more successful. Our boys' varsity soccer team finished with an outstanding record of 21-1-1. The Cardinals only tie was with Dublin and their only loss was to Northmont. They played strong soccer throughout the season but their best play came when they needed it the most, in the state tournament! By eliminating their challengers fairly easily in the first few games of the tournament, the Cards advanced to the regional game. However, the battle was firece for the regional title. The Cards played the Westerville North Warriors in what seemed like a duplicate game of last year's district finals. However, Manabu Takasugi put the ball into the net with 1:58 remaining in sudden death. One stage of the Cards' "unfinished business' was completed with the win over North, but the team did not stop. After the victory over North, the team traveled to Dayton to play the Huber Heights Wayne Warriors for the State Semi-Finals. During a hard fought battle, Tim Senff scored the winning goal with less than a minute in regulation, ending the game 3-2 in favor of the Cardinals! Something else besides great soccer made this game exceptionally exciting. The Cardinal fan support was tremendous. Many students and teachers, decked in red and blue, made the hour and a half drive to support their soccer team.

Thomas Worthington played Stow Walsh Jesuit in the State Finals on November 9, 1991. Dublin High School's enormous stadium was the location of the big game. Once again, Cardinal fan support was wonderful. Hundreds of Cardinals flocked into the stadium to rally their team to a state championship. The day went perfectly for the soccer team. It was obvious that the Cardinals dominated the game, but it took about 36 minutes to get their first goal, scored by Manabu Takasugi, a.k.a. "Boo". Jay McNeil beat his defender and scored with 48 seconds left in the first half to give the Cards a comfortable lead. However, a 2-0 lead was not enough for the Cards who wanted more. The final goal came from Dustin Swinehart who redirected a beautiful cross by Nathan Fairchild, making the score 3-0 Cardinals — a blow out for a state championship game. Finally, the Cards finished all of their "unfinished business."

Victory
For Whom the Bell Tolls

"The ringing bell echoed throughout the town, announcing that Worthington High School was once again victorious."

Thomas Worthington High School is known for its traditions. Senior Shirts, the Cardinal Clap, seasonal Spirit Rallies are practiced annually at this school. A 'lost tradition' just doesn't seem possible, but unfortunately, an impossibility has become reality. The Victory Bell was a tradition at Worthington High School not long ago. In recent years though, the bell tradition has been lost in the shuffle of change.

Every year, the Senior class purchases a gift for the school in remembrance of their 'Cardinal' days. The selection of the gift is important because it represents the character of the class. In 1968, the Senior class decided to leave their mark with a victory bell. This was to be no ordinary bell; it had to be faultless. Thus, the search for the perfect bell began.

Sue Keltner, the 1968 Class Secretary, and her parents, drove down to Athens, Ohio one day to visit Ohio University. During a break in the visit they decided to browse around the town. By a stroke of luck, an old antique store caught their attention and the Keltners decided to take a look. While in the shop, they spotted an old farm bell, originally used at a farmhouse in Southern Ohio. The historic quality fit the senior class' expectations. The Keltner's discovery of the bell was opportunistic . They realized this, purchased the bell, and drove it home in the trunk of their car.

Soon after their return, Mr. Harold C. McCord, Superintendent at the time, arranged for a tower frame to be constructed for hanging the bell. The three-legged metal tower remains today, giving the bell strength and distinction.

The purpose of the 1968 Senior Class gift had been to commemorate athletic victories by ringing the bell. They originally wanted to locate the bell near the stadium. Since football was one of the more popular sports, having the bell close by would be convenient for victory celebrations. The Victory Bell was eventually placed in front of the school. Because of its accessible location, the bell would benefit all activities. After the completion of the bell installment, the Senior class of 1969 began the new tradition.

Home football games provided an eventful evening for the Worthington students. After a victorious game, groups of students would gather around the ringing bell. "In the '70's, the cheerleaders met to ring the bell after a victory." Stated Mrs. Pam Galipault, former cheerleading advisor. The students not only celebrated a Worthington victory, but also their school pride as they gathered around the Victory Bell. Even after the bell ringing, students would go out as groups to celebrate. The atmosphere around the Victory Bell no doubt was social. "After ringing the bell, students would go to D.Q., Friendlys, or even Farrells to socialize." Reflects Erik Thompson, WHS Math Academic Assistant and former student. The town of Worthington also became involved in the celebrating. The ringing bell echoed throughout the town, announcing that Worthington High School was once again victorious.

The Victory Bell now stands silently in front of the auxiliary gym, amidst the trees. The tradition is a victim to the shuffle of change at Thomas Worthington High School. Ringing the Victory Bell gave Worthington students pride for their school. Since TWHS seeks a reputation set on traditions, why not reinstate an important tradition such as the Victory Bell? Hopefully the bell will once again become a celebrated tradition in Worthington.

Rules ...and Regulations

"Quiet study halls became the new fad at TWHS."

Thomas Worthington High Shcool is a new school in an old building. With this "new" high school, exciting changes took place throughout the building, inside and out. Along with these changes came new rules and regulations. Some of these new rules affected the entire student body and some just affected certain classes.

The first change that hit everybody hard, including teachers, was starting school at 7:30 A.M. even though it still ended at 2:50 P.M. This meant waking up a half hour earlier, at least for most of us, so we could get to school on time. Starting at this time was to allow students the opportunity to choose an extra class. Great idea if you are a very studious person, poor idea if you like to sleep another hour. Study halls all of a sudden became a favorite class for students. Some students even liked study hall so much they had two. Definitely some good came out of the longer day. Kids were able to schedule more classes, and there was more flexibility in most everyone's schedule. People could have a half hour lunch and also have seven academic classes. But, if they chose to go the study hall route, they ran into a roadblock that screamed shh!

Quiet study halls became the new fad at TWHS. In the beginning everybody had to atteend these spitball-paper wad throwing contests. But they soon evolved into an underclass study hall for students not achieving academic goals set by the administration. Juniors and seniors getting a certain grade point average were allowed to attend relaxed study hall in our new cafeteria-commons area. This turned out to be a smart move by the administration because it cut down on the amount of students and noise in the quiet study halls. The policy is still not fair to those underclassmen suffering in the quiet study halls, but they will just have to earn their turn. One way to get out of the quiet study halls is to go to one of many options available to students: the gym, the library or a computer lab. With these options came another new policy, that of the student I.D.

Student identification cards became the new way of taking attendance during study halls. People who chose to go to one of the options available needed to turn in their I.D. card for attendance. If they did not have an I.D. card for some reason, they were sent back to study hall until they got one, causing mass confusion among students and teachers alike. Questions arose like, When do I get my I.D. back? Do I turn it in during my lunch hour? And probably the most asked question was, Why? Even though some still have not caught on to this new system, most everyone else learned, don't leave home without your identification card.

Another change brought by the new school year affected every class except the seniors. This new policy came to be known as closed lunch. The administration decided that with a new cafeteria-commons area, everyone did not need to go off campus for lunch. Even though the cafeteria is still crowded, it was a good decision simply because of safety reasons. The seniors' privilege can easily be lost if not used properly. Closed lunch was not accepted with open arms by the underclassmen, but they are making the most of our beautiful new cafeteria.

Changes are hard to accept by some people, but with a "new" high school comes changes . These were hard to get used to, but the students at TWHS were up to the task, and came together as a family. With these changes the administration feels that the best will keep getting better.

First Impressions

When I opened the new TWHS doors, the student entrance doors, the first day of school, I couldn't help feeling as if I were at Disneyland. I took my first few steps tentatively, as if fearful of unsure footing. I looked up, down, and all around me, and even reached for the camera that simply didn't exist, around my neck. I had been at Worthington High School for three years, and suddenly, there I was, a tourist in my own school.

As I progressed further down the hallway it appeared as if I were moving in slow motion, catching every glance, every reaction to this new old school. Then I realized that I hadn't yet recognized a single face. Hey, I was thinking, these can't be students. They must be actors who play students on t.v. My gosh, I've just walked into a sit-com. Chrissy and Jack will be in the kitchen, and Janet will overhear what they're saying, the old-overhearing-and-misunderstanding-the-situation-routine.

Then I saw a familiar face. I guessed that he was as lost as I was, because I heard him asking a teacher the location of the nearest bathroom. I thought it was a little melodramatic for the teacher to then whip out a piece of paper and a pen to draw a diagram of directions. Yes, the teachers were overacting a bit, like the one planted in the middle of the main hallway to direct students to their classes. She reminded me of Leslie Nielsen in the scene in the Naked Gun where he plays an umpire, and starts doing backflips.

Then I got a look at the white plaster wall that covered up the old gym. What in the heck was that thing? I passed it off as a feeble attempt at modern art and continued down the hallway.

I was thoroughly impressed with the new blue windows, and the incredible view into the cafeteria from the guidance center. One could gaze longingly into the cafeteria which now boasted a set of Greek pillars leading into a checkerboard arena. I waited in anticipation for the arrival of lunch, and the chance to test the old arena out with a game of hopscotch. But first, I needed to go to my classes, which were still in the same nondescript classrooms.

On the way to lunch, I happened to spot a group of students being given a tour of the high school, only reinforcing my sense of being a tourist. They were Freshmen, and they were, in a word, small. I thought back to when I was a Freshman, up at Kilbourne. Then I realized that these students had never known main campus before renovations. They wouldn't be experiencing the same bittersweet reaction I was. I realized that the school in which I had received the majority of my education no longer existed. And, although I had rarely contemplated the split, I found indeed that there were many faces I missed seeing. I missed as well, seeing the parking lot overflowing, as if it housed energy and not just automobiles.

But at the same time, I couldn't deny that the completed construction was pleasing, and the hallways were significantly less crowded. Life must go on, I decided, and indeed it has. My status as a tourist evolved into that of a houseguest on an extended visit. Recently, I attained residential status. Great Scott, this must make me a Cardinal.

Construction

The Cardinal Constant

What better way to test a human being's limits than with construction?

I was thinking the other day, about how incredibly possible it is that the men who we have all come to know and love as construction workers, who sport the orange hats and tool belts, might be part of some sort of Cardinal conspiracy. I give you this: the construction workers are pawns, victims of a cruel psychological game, perhaps under Worthingtonian order. Perhaps Thomas Worthington High School is under surveillance, as part of a study testing just how far the human mind can be pushed, and toyed with, before it succumbs to the pressure. It makes perfect sense if you think about it. What better way to test a human being's limits than with construction? How much of what the construction workers do is really necessary, and how much is a part of this wicked mind game?

Consider these:

#1 — The white plaster wall that covered the old gym was actually just a ploy to see how the student body would respond to halved hallways, having been promised that crowding would now be a thing of the past. Proof? When it became clear that the student body was responding positively, by embellishing it with a series of murals, it was immediately removed, as it was no longer an annoyance to the students and faculty, but rather, a source of pleasure, almost pop culture.

#2 — The second floor shook for a week as high intensity machinery blasted outside its windows, not because the machinery served any constructive purpose, but because an assimilated earthquake has often times proven to be the breaking point for study groups of the past. Proof? After a week of futile attempts, the shaking stopped, with absolutely no concrete evidence of work completed.

#3 — As construction of the new commons continued past the predicted Christmas Break completion date, the boards closing off the work area were removed, thus allowing the student body to watch construction from the second floor. The whole set up was not unlike something one might see in the great apes section at a local zoo. Students were not permitted to feed the construction workers, nor touch the glass. The purpose of this display was undoubtedly to repulse the students at the exploitation of these workers into giving into the game. Proof? After the students appeared to be enjoying the exhibit "Construction Workers on Display", construction was hastily completed, and the workers were moved to another part of the school.

Many other incidents are worthy of consideration as well. Think for a moment, about how the transportation of materials always seems to mysteriously take place during class changes, when the crowding of hallways is at its peak, when the most logical time to transport materials would be the other 54 minutes of every hour that students are typically not in the hallways. Think about the CB's that blast construction lingo from the workers' trucks when no worker is in sight to intercept the call. Yet the man on the other end continues to speak, to himself. Think about the week when there were no lights on one end of the main hall on the second floor, and think about the students who were booted out of their lockers for the supposed asbestos removal. Think about the man in the bulldozer whose only purpose seemed to be circling the building, over and over, and over again. Think about all these things, and consider how highly probable it is that this isn't just about construction. This is a test, to see just how much we can take. Indeed we were annoyed, even close to the edge once, but now we're veterans. We can take just about anything they want to dish out to us. Just think about it.

By Trish DeWitt

Perhaps this is the man whose only purpose seems to be circling the school in the bulldozer over and over again, drowning out the distracting voices of teachers. However, possibly prompted by the presence of a camera, he appears to be doing something constructive here.

Prudent administrators merely rented this fence, knowing that after construction is completed, other lawn ornaments will be made readily available for display.

Taking great pride in his work, Mr. Northrup shows the construction workers just how it's done. Mr. Northrup learned his incredibly precise painting technique, "brush on brush off," by rewinding Daniel Son's painting scene in The Karate Kid over and over again.

Cardinal Country

Many structural changes faced the students at Thomas Worthington High School this year. However, the familiar sight of our Cardinal reminded us that we were still the same old Worthington at heart! This symbol dates back to the year 1939, when the Cardinal was used simply as a good luck charm. Finally, in 1979, the Cardinal took flight on the athletic fields and courts of WHS.

The main purpose of the Cardinal is to boost fan support and provide the school with a sense of pride. Over the last decade, the tradition of the silence rule has kept the identity of the Cardinal anonymous. This has even prompted teachers to volunteer to wear the costume for special events.

Recently, it has brought the Spirit Stick to pep rallies and awarded it to the most spirited and enthusiastic class. The Senior Class won this honor this fall at our opening pep rally. The Cardinal has been a great tradition at WHS for many years, and will hopefully continue to represent and encourage the spirit and pride of TWHS.

SPIRIT LINKS

As a part of Spirit Week, the fun-filled week before Homecoming, Student Council raised money for United Way. Through a project known as Spirit Links, students donated their spare change during their lunch periods, with one quarter equal to one paper link. The class which collected the most money and therefore the most links, earned points toward the Spirit Week trophy, to be awarded at the end of the week. When the links were stretched across the football field at the Thursday night bonfire, it was obvious that the seniors were victorious with 588 links, raising $147.07. A check for $350.00 was presented to the United Way. Co-chairperson of Spirit Links, Greg Fisher, summed it up by saying, "The student body really pulled together for a good cause." At the end of Spirit Week, there was a tie for the winning class. The trophy was shared by the senior and sophomore classes.

Students of the Month

One of the most coveted awards given at Thomas Worthington High School is the nomination of Student of the Month. Every month each teacher has the opportunity to choose two students who exemplify achievement and excellence in the classroom. These names are then sent to each department head, who chooses a select few and sends these names on to Donna Dawson for the final decision as to who will be selected as Student of the Month. This is such a popular program that the highly innovative English Department started its own Students of the Month. As Tim Senff eloquently summed up the importance of the award after winning it for the month of December, "It made me feel really neat inside. It was kind of a warm, fuzzy feeling. This award made my year." Supporting Tim's sentiment are the happy faces of past, present, and future Students of the Month.

NEW TRADITIONS

Although a new program, intramurals quickly became familiar to everyone, providing a variety of activities and competitions for all students to get involved. Director Sandy Ferris said, "Students were eager to participate and showed great enthusiasm for all of the activities." Over four hundred students were involved during study halls, after school, or on the weekends. Competitions that took place during study halls consisted of a free throw contest, ping-pong, badminton and volleyball tournaments. However, the largest event was the Intramural Basketball League. Every Monday and Wednesday night teams competed with the hope of winning their way to Super Saturday. On Super Saturday the finals for the three divisions of basketball teams were held, along with a three point contest and slam dunk contest. Also held on Monday and Wednesday nights were aerobics classes to keep the students and teachers in shape. Other activities included a student/faculty tennis tournament and bowling team. In addition, many students participated in a worthwhile cause. This was a putt-putt tournament at Worthington Square benefiting the Epilepsy Foundation. The first year for the intramural program at TWHS was well received, and is sure to continue.

Look at these excited freshmen, ready to go to their first high school dance. Shannon McDonough and Andy Hamilton look as if they're ready to boogie on the dance floor. Leigh Anderson seems to be excited, but it doesn't look as if Mike Chilcoat got enough sleep last night. Travis Menke and Julie Lunaman are ready to party.

AN EXPERIENCE NEVER FORGOTTEN

Plans to construct a new high school while remodeling the old school were carried out over the 1991-1992 school year. These plans entailed including the ninth graders into the new campuses. The freshmen, who had previously enjoyed the privacy of a separate campus, Kilbourne, were now placed with the upperclassmen. They were thrown into the new situation of a full-fledged high school setting. Along with these experiences came high school events such as Homecoming. This dance was the first event the freshmen had the opportunity to attend. Hollywood Homecoming was to be held in the auxiliary gym on October 19, 1991.

During the days before the dance the freshmen voiced their expectations. They were awaiting the event with much excitement and anticipation. Most freshmen agreed that they would have a lot of fun. Many envisioned the dance's decorations to coordinate with the limelight theme. Jessica Reishman and Kelly Brushaber said, "The decorations will go along with the Hollywood theme as gold coloring and stars decorate the gym." The dance was also expected to be "groovy and zany" by Craig Rock and Ryan Wilkins.

When interviewing freshmen the following Monday, October 21, 1991, the majority said they had an enjoyable experience, but believed there was room for improvement. Megan Croy stated, "It was fun but I thought that there should have been more decorations and there could have been better music." Several freshmen boys agreed with that opinion, adding that a more professional D.J. should have been used.

All in all the freshman thought the dance would be a memorable event. Because Homecoming was the first important event of the school year, the freshmen felt a need to socialize and enjoy the pleasures of their elders. Fortunately they did this with ease. The freshmen had a positive attitude which made the dance enjoyable for all. They did extremely well handling the pressures of a grand high school event.

SOPHOMORE OVERCOMES OBSTACLES THROUGH DCP

Many exciting programs exist at Thomas Worthington High School that people might not even be aware of. For example, a sophomore at TWHS, Robert Chaffin, is a special education student involved in one of these programs. This program is called DCP which stands for Downtown Community Program and is a collaboration of districts including Westerville, Upper Arlington, and Worthington.

DCP provides a sense of independence, individuality, and job training. Robert's freshman year he worked at the school Bagel Shop. He did a wonderful job and gained responsibility and self confidence. Because he showed such initiative, he was able to progress into the DCP program. He works until sixth period and then comes back to school and attends his regular classes. This enables him to excel in jobs that will help him train for the future. At first he started out at the Holiday Inn washing clothes and working in the kitchen. After four weeks at the Inn, he advanced to washing cars and changing oil at the Nationwide garage. He enjoys his new job, and hopes he can use the experience he has gained after graduating from TWHS.

Robert's teacher, Mrs. Nelson, has monthly meetings with his teachers at the DCP program. They all try to assist Robert in developing his occupational skills. Next year he will attend the Northwest Career Center to continue his education in Automobile Technology. He is anxiously looking forward to these future plans.

This DCP program has been a beneficial experience for Robert. He has learned to enjoy the responsibility and independence which has accompanied his membership in the DCP program.

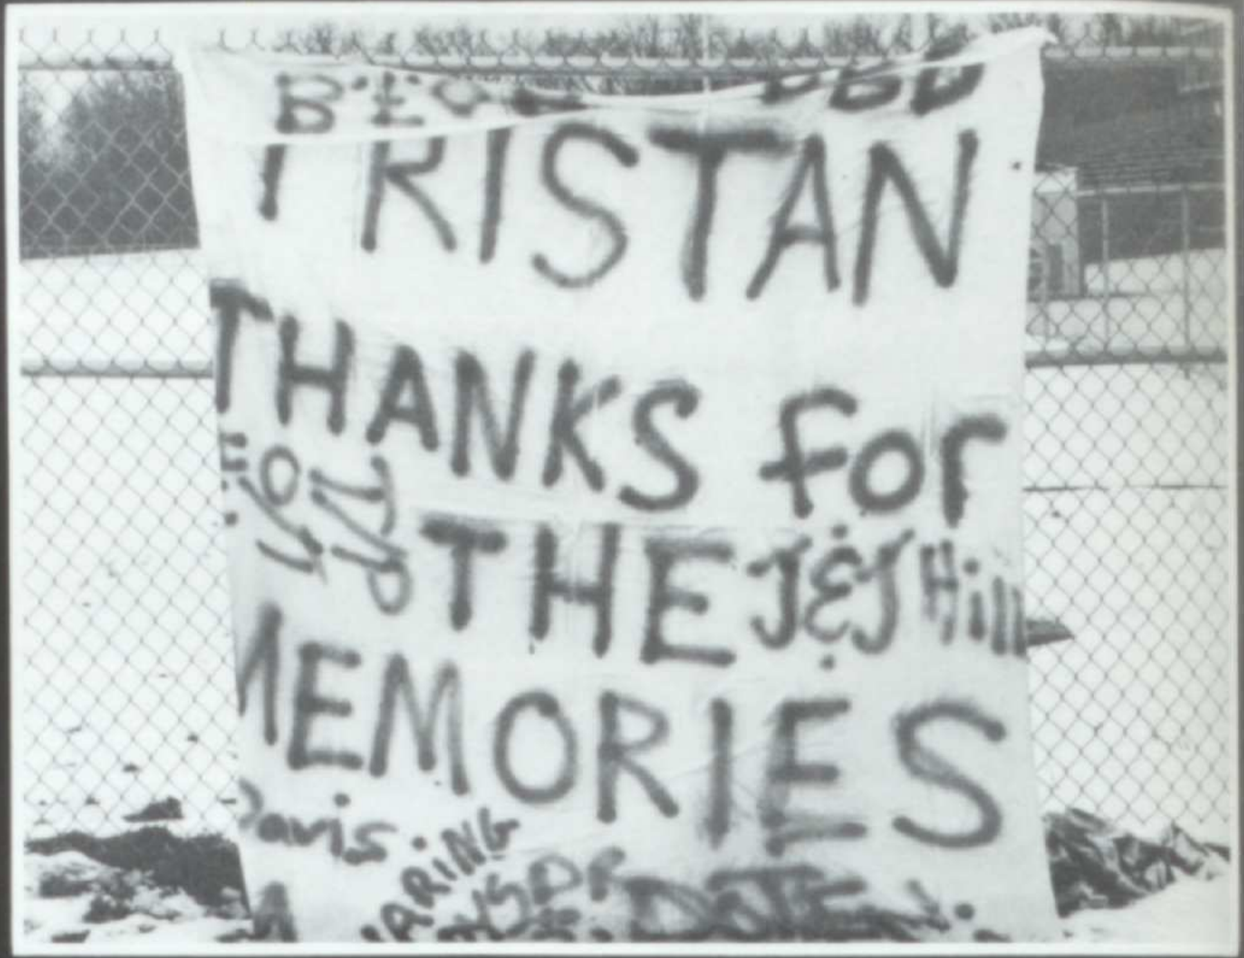
In Memory of Tristan Celnicker



TRIBUTE ON PASSING OF A VERY REAL PERSON

People are of two kinds, and he
Was the kind I'd like to be.
Some preach their virtues, and a few
Express their lives by what they do;
That sort was he. No flowery phrase
Or glibly spoken word of praise
Won friends for him. He wasn't cheap
Or shallow, but his course ran deep,
And it was pure. You know the kind.
Not many in the life you find
Whose deeds outrun their words so far
That more than what they seem, they are.

A NEW FRONTIER FOR STUDENTS

A new program, under the direction of Dr. McElligot,was put in place in Worthington and sixteen other school districts in Franklin county for the 1991-1992 school year. The districts have all collaborated to form the Christopher Program. The diversity represented by the students is beneficial to all those involved. Each district has two junior representatives per school who participate. The program is an experiment in education that involves leaving school around mid-day to attend Franklin University. The students attend a type of classroom where learning is self-motivated. This independent learning also requires limited instruction from adults.

Students representing TWHS are Jodi Ahnmark and Carly McVey. They describe the Christopher Program as including global issues, leadership skills, and a strong emphasis on self motivation. According to Jodi and Carly, there is no "typical" day at the program. Days vary from having speakers to working on projects, and even an occasional field trip to participate in community work. The program's downtown location increases the accessibility to many resources which the students use for assignments, such as papers or projects. Being a Christopher student entails accepting the challenge of endurance for composing and presenting their numerous projects. Both Jodi and Carly agreed that being with people from other schools has been a beneficial experience. Carly stated, "I love having class with people from other schools. It is nice to have people in your class who have the same interests, goals, and work ethics as you do." Jodi and Carly also enjoy the informal atmosphere. The casual environment provides a more amiable feeling among the teachers and students.

Interested students must submit an application to be eligible for selection to the program. To receive an application a student must first be nominated by a teacher or guidance counselor. The completed applications are then reviewed by program officials. These officials choose two students from each school involved that they believe are most capable of the challenges the Christopher Program presents. Jodi and Carly both recommend the program highly for anyone that is interested in becoming more globally aware and enjoys a large class which includes history, English, art, and a foreign language. Overall, the girls feel it is the student's personal responsibility to experience the Christopher Program to its fullest potential.

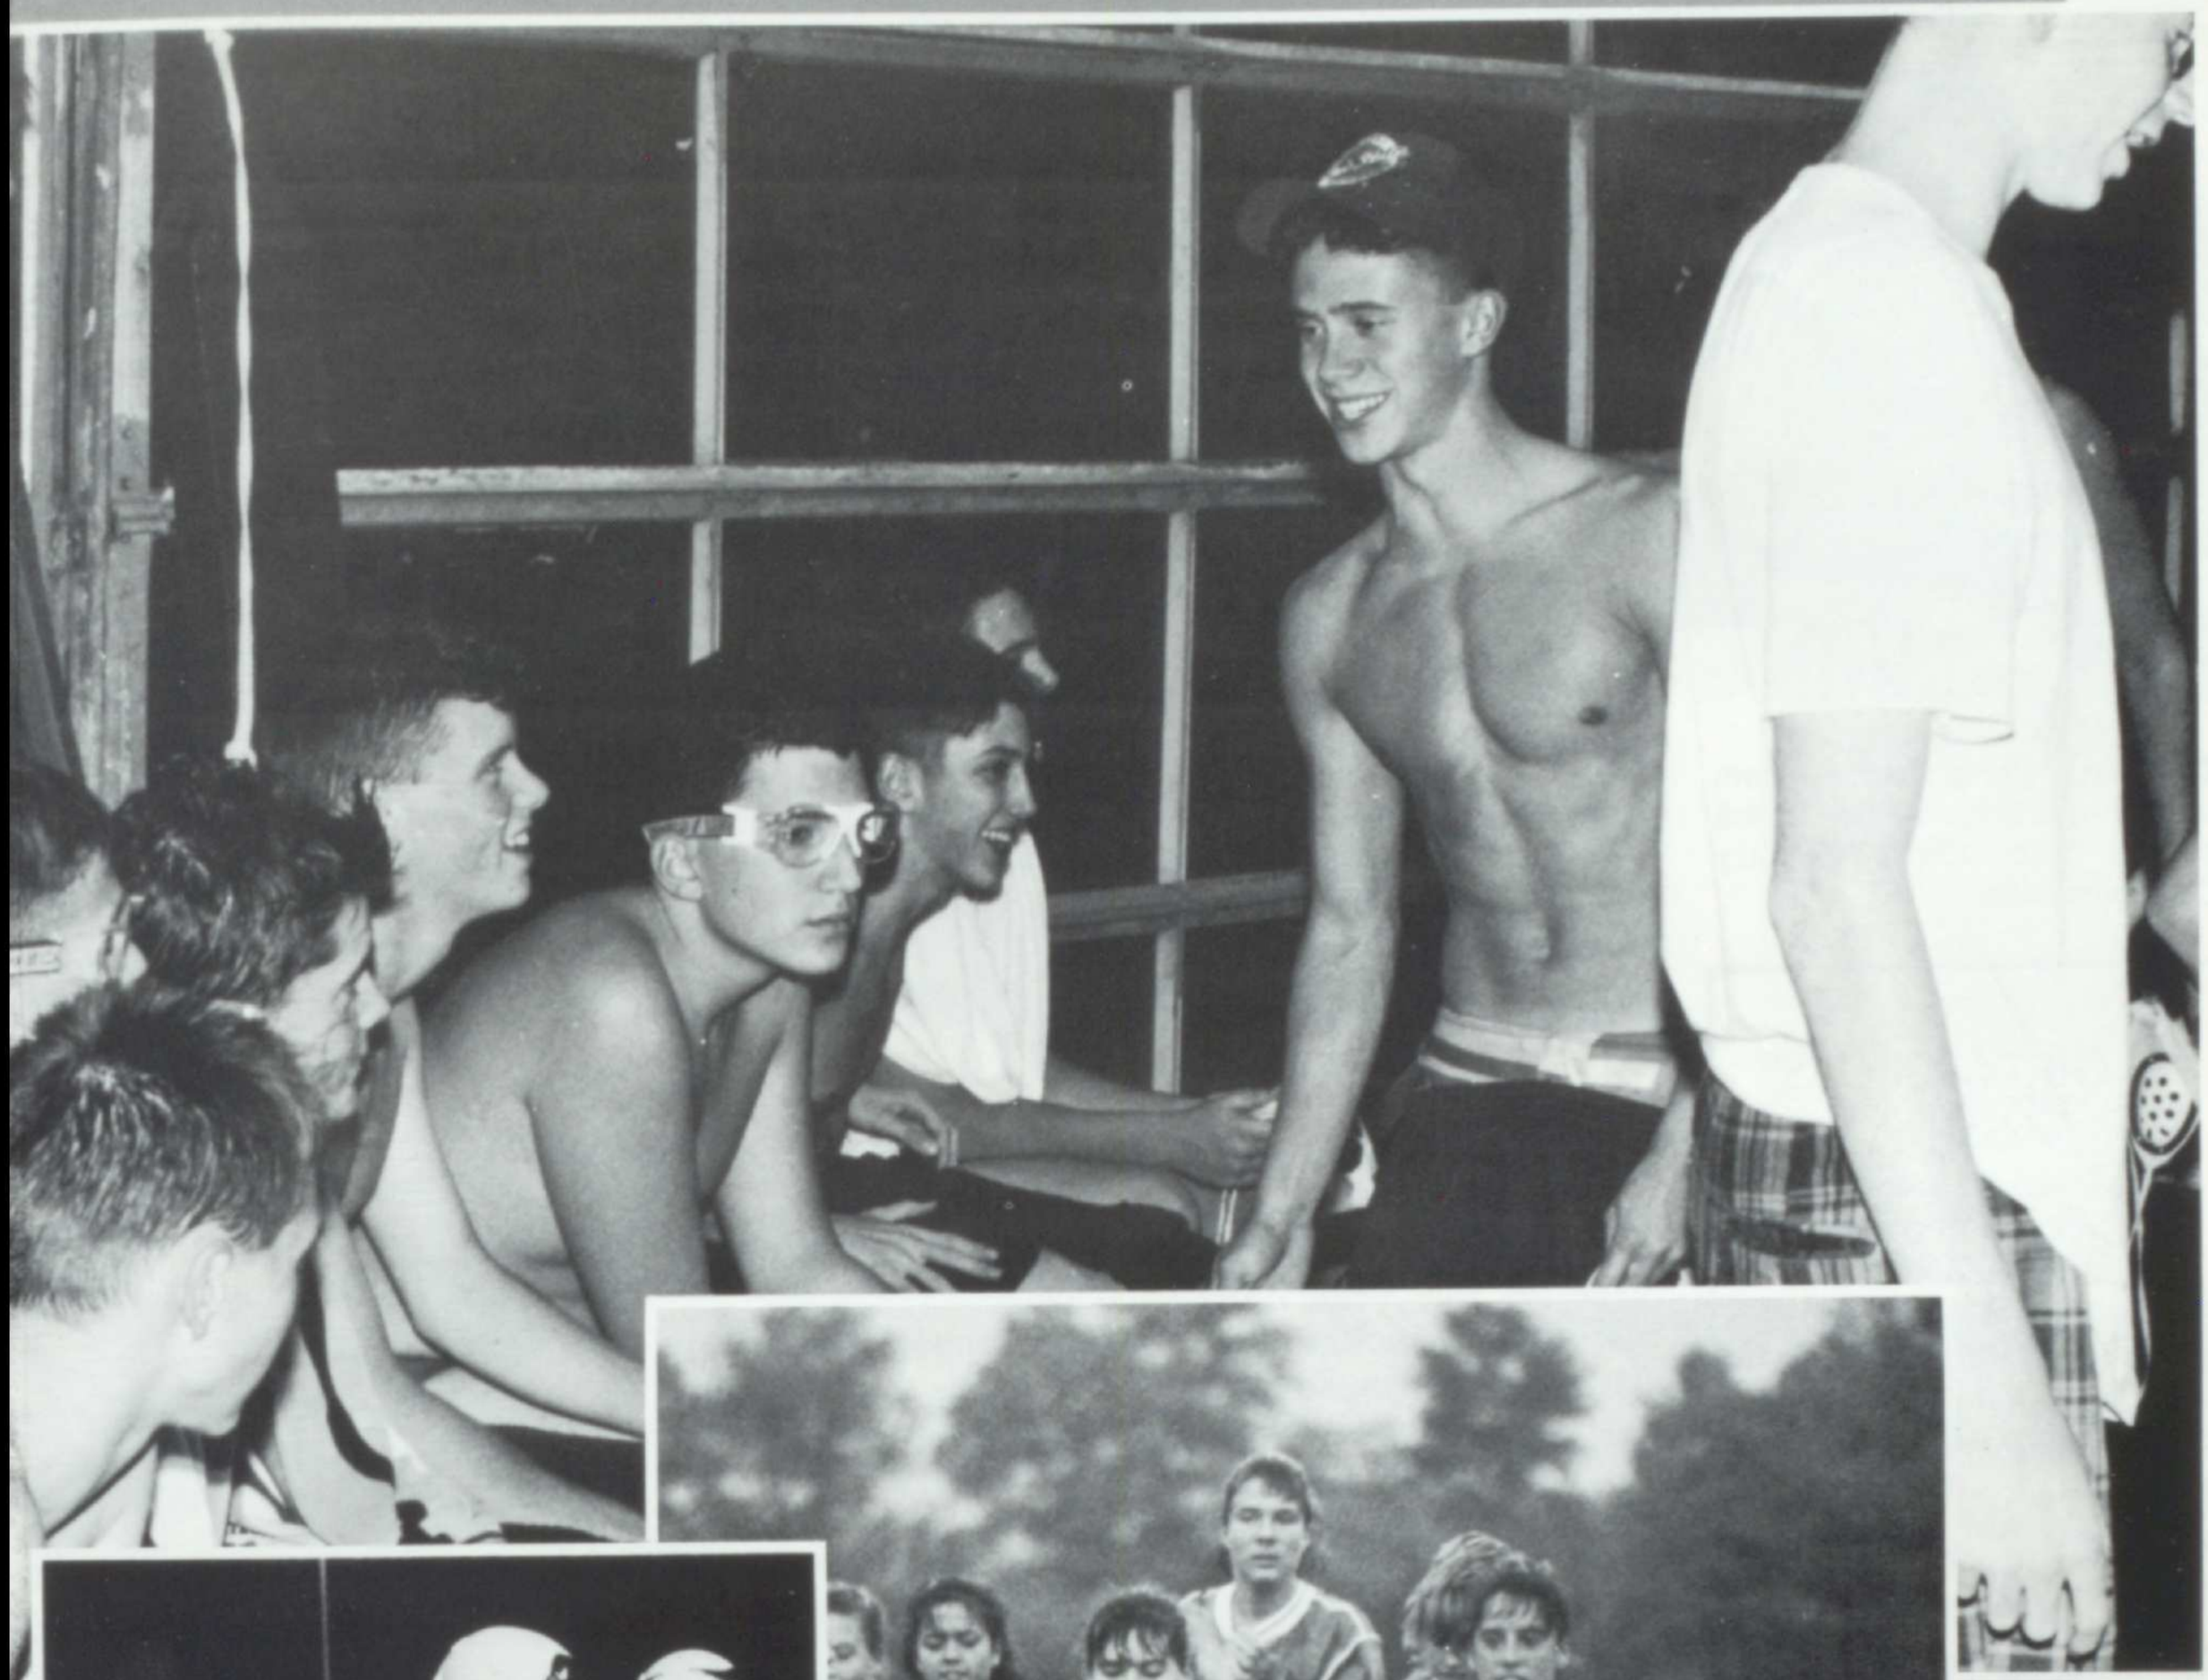
Getting the Point

Always ahead of his time fashion wise, freshman Henry Walker hopes to start a new trend in eyewear with these classy featherweight swimming lenses.
He hopes to have his own line of eyewear out in time for next year's holiday shopping. The lenses will be available in about one hour.

Mutual expressions of intensity grace the faces of Lisa Fudge, Heather White, Katie Cunin, and Cherine Arundel as they gaze longingly onto the field from the sidelines. They show little enthusiasm for fellow players, because, quite arrogantly, they consider their own capabilities to be superior to those of their team mates.



The health of the players is of the utmost importance to Coach Murray, who checks Ryan Pirnat's pulse before allowing him to return to the game.

So set on rallying her team, consisting of Dawn Wolfe, Eileen Johnston, Sarah Forster, Alex Chamberlain, Jenny Kohler, Missy Anderson, and Paige Renske to victory, Amy Porta doesn't have the time or the patience for childish antics such as smiling or clapping.

GIRLS' CROSS COUNTRY

"The season's hard work payed off in the end with O.C.C. , District, and Regional Championships, as well as a second-place finish at the State Meet. "

-Angela Stillwagon &
Kristin Gaddis

The Girls' Cross Country team celebrates a Second-Place Finish at the State Cross Country Championships.

EXCELLENCE Is Tradition

People have come to expect the very best when it comes to girls' cross country in Worthington. That is because the team ranks among the state's elite year in and year out. This season the Lady Cardinals compiled an impressive record of 118 wins and 1 loss. The sole loss came at the State Cross Country Championships where the squad finished a strong second. Coach Gary Smith described the team as "the best I have ever had!" It is easy to understand why. Seven Lady Cardinals were awarded All-OCC honors and an impressive seven runners were named to the All-District team. The girls' cross country team also epitomized the "student-athlete." While the team was busy winning everything in sight, they apparently found plenty of time to devote to their studies. The first seven runners for the team this season had a cumulative grade point average over three point nine. The leadership of seniors Angela Stillwagon, Kristin Gaddis, Sara Ater, Lani Veach and Courtney Moser was important as the Cardinals stayed focused en route to winning the League, District and Reigonal meets. Next year the Cardinals return many outstanding runners and one can only expect the tradition of excellence to continue.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK

The boys' cross country team fared well under first year head coach Nancy Beattie. What was expected to be a rebuilding year turned into a more than respectable season which surpassed the expectations of many. The season was highlighted by Junior Brian DeRose's first place performance at the District Championships. Coupled with Jeremy Croy's tenth place finish the Cardinals were strong enough to take third. DeRose's performance throughout the season earned him a spot on the All-OCC and All-District teams. Jeremy Croy was named to the Second Team All-OCC and All-District. Coach Beattie was truly encouraged by the team's efforts this season which she remarked were excellent considering the fact that the squad had been divided between two high schools. Juniors Jeremy Croy and Brian DeRose return next year to lead what promises to be a strong team. Team Co-Captain Roy Teti summarized the season by saying, " the team accomplished goals that Thomas Worthington teams in the future will definitely desire to attain."

In the classroom and out on the course, Tak Shigehara is never too far out of line.

FIELD HOCKEY

Using the baseball diamond as their new field, Ravina Mulchandani aggressively chases after the ball as Katie Cunin yells encouraging advice to help advance the ball down the field.

DOMINATING The Hockey Field

The field hockey team enjoyed another fun and successful season under the leadership of fourth-year coach Kim Willis. The 1991 Field Hockey players were led by captains Cami McBride, Emily Mily, and Jen Rachfal. The team proved successful in the league with a 7-4-1 record and overall they ended with an 8-8-1 record.

One memorable and exciting tournament game against Bexley pushed the Cardinals into double overtime. The Cards would not back down as they valiantly fought, keeping the tie, and advancing to a shootout. After misses and goals by each team, Emily Mily shot, made the goal, and triumphantly led the team to a strong, well-earned victory. Junior Heather White states, "It was the most exciting game of the season. It kept everyone's attention until the final moments and we all left the game feeling really confident." This game brought the team together as they celebrated all their hard work of the year.

Concluding the season, Emily Mily was awarded All-Star, All-League, and Most Valuable Player. Other impressive honors went to Jamie Pack (All-League), Jen Conrad (All-League, Best Defensive player), and Christi Nigh (Best Offensive player). Working together as a team and having fun was what made the Field Hockey Cardinals accomplish their goals and have such an outstanding season.

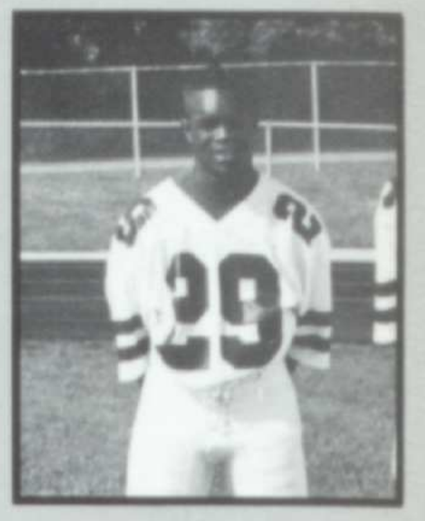
FOOTBALL

"Nobody expected much out of the Cardinals this season, but by the season's end, I believe we earned everyone's respect."
-Antonio Benton



New head coach Terry Lichtenberg gets a warm welcome to Cardinal football as one of his first games comes down to the wire. It is definately a time for nail biting. I wonder exactly what our new football leader is saying into that headset.

VALIANT Effort

The first Thomas Worthington football team ended the season with a 4-6 record, including 1-4 in the O.C.C. This inaugural season for the Thomas Worthington Cardinals and coach Terry Lichtenberg had many interesting twists and turns. The Cards opened their season with a 29-3 loss at home to a powerful Pickerington squad. Their first win came in the second game against Walnut Ridge. The Cards shut out their opposition and went on to victory 10-0. After a win over Newark, the Cardinals showed that they were for real by taking, then state ranked and play-off qualifier, Beechcroft to the wire before losing 16-15. The team than rebounded to beat Mifflin the following week at Mifflin. After this game, the Cards went into a three game slide in which they were defeated by Westerville South, Westland, and Gahanna. They snapped their losing streak by defeating Groveport 21-18 in a close, exciting ball game. In doing so, the Cards earned their first O.C.C. win. TWHS closed the season with a loss to Dublin that was much closer than the score indicated. Senior Antonio Benton stated, "We played a great game on both sides of the ball, but unfortunately we came up a little short." The 1991 Cardinals were led by captains Antonio Benton, Marc Amos, Derrin Ritchie, and Tom Worthington, who scored the school's first toudhdown. These players made our school's first season one to remember, which ended with many athletes receiving recognition. Derrin Ritchie and Dimitrious Stanley earned 1st team All O.C.C., while Phil Utter, Qwann Woods, and Marc AMos achieved 2nd team honors. Josh Lemmon was awarded Honorable Mention. In the All District voting, Stanley was on the 1st team, Ritchie was Special Mention, and Benton and Aaron Turano earned Honorable Mention.

Change was the theme for this years girls' varsity soccer team. Jeff Vincent, the previous coach, transferred to Worthington Kilbourne to coach the boys' varsity soccer team. Viet Pham was hired to take Vincent's place. Neither the team nor the coach knew what to expect from the season. Although the team had ten returning letterman, it was still a fairly young team. Strong play from the underclassmen was important for the team's success. A solid 9-7-2 record was obtained by the girls.

Mr. Pham wanted to establish a unified soccer program. Previous years showed a split between the different teams and Pham's goal was to eliminate the barriers between the teams. By warming up together and supporting each other the three teams became one big unit. As a result many new friendships were made and memories of a great soccer season will never be forgotten. According to Amy Porta, "It was a very fun and successful season despite all of the changes."

Numerous players also recalled individual honors. Jenny Kohler, Alex Chamberlain, and Amy Porta all earned OCC honors. Kohler and Chamberlain also received district honors. Eileen Johnston and Amy Porta were named All State Scholar Athletes.

COMPLETE SUCCESS

The boys' varsity soccer team had an almost perfect season. Senior tri-captains, Nathan Fairchild, Chris Malik, and Dustin Swinehart led their team to twenty-one wins, one loss, and one tie. High goals were set for the team at the beginning of the season. Coach Ian Hamilton knew that this team had the potential to be State Champs. Through hard work and dedication this goal was obtained. The Cards defeated the Stone Walsh Jesuit Warriors 3-0 in the State finals on November 9, 1991. This State Championship was the first ever for a boys' varsity soccer team at any Worthington High School.

Post season honors were awarded to many players on the team. First team OCC was awarded to Chris Malik, Dustin Swinehart, Nathan Fairchild, and Brian Parsons. Second team OCC was awarded to Tim Senff, Andy Minister, and Aaron Turano. Jay McNeil received OCC Honorable Mention. First team All District was awarded to Malik, Fairchild, and Swinehart. Second team All District was awarded to Parsons. Turano received All District Honorable Mention. First team All State was awarded to Fairchild and Malik. Second team all State was awarded to Swinheart. Malik was named OCC Player of the Year and Fairchild was named District and Ohio Player of the Year. Fairchild was also named an All-American. Coach Ian Hamilton was named OCC, District, Ohio Division One, and Ohio Coach of the Year.

WORKING Together for Success

Even after splitting into two high schools, the Thomas Worthington Cardinals pulled off an excellent tennis season. Early in the year, many onlookers didn't know what to expect from the tennis team because of the split. However, after many matches, the Cardinals demonstrated that they would be a hard working and successful team.

Headed by first year Varsity coach Sandy Ferris and J V coach Neil Walters, the team ended the season with an impressive record of 15-1. The Cardinals were 5-0 in the OCC and during the season the only match they lost was to Arlington. Jenny Ferris, Amanda Stark, Lisa Lambert, Alison McCarthy, and Jenny Strauser were named first team all OCC. Jenny Ferris stated after concluding the OCC Tournament, "When we finished our OCC matches during the regular season with a 5-0 record, we expected the OCC Tournament to be an easy victory. Surprisingly, it came down to the wire. The team really pulled together, with everyone playing their best, to take a one point win over Gahanna."

After the Sectionals, the Cardinals advanced four out of the five courts to Districts. Here the Cardinals faced difficult matches of playing in the rain and were knocked out of the tournament. Dedication and hard work molded the Cards into their terrific season; however, the typical saying from the tennis girls before every match was, "Who brought the food today?"

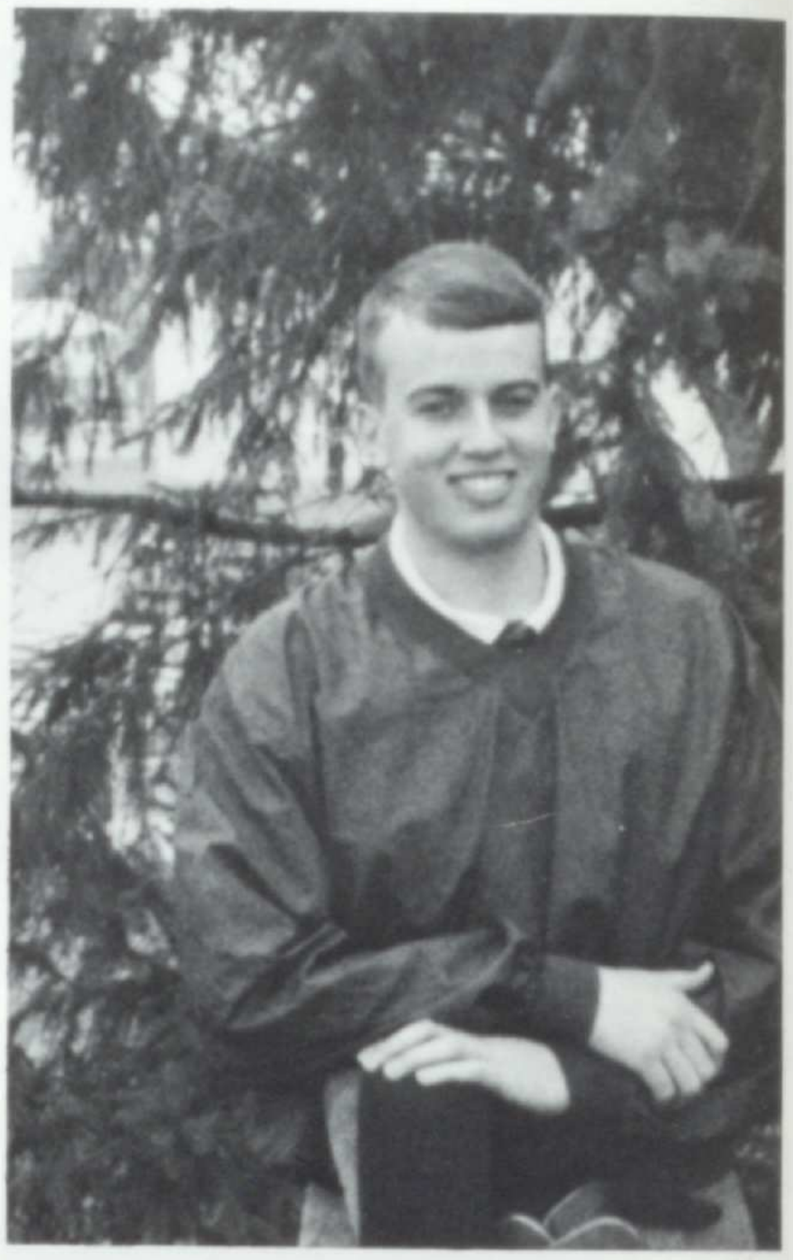
Coming off an O.C.C. championship season is tough for any squad, especially when the returning lettermen are divided, but the 1991 Cardinal golfers responded with another fine season. Led by captains Matt Minister, Andy Belknap, and Greg Fisher, the Cards compiled a record of 75-21, while going 16-4 for second place in the O.C.C. Included in this superb record was a 2nd place finish in the 22 team Shawnee Classic and a 3rd place finish at sectionals. Although the Cards did suffer through some tough rounds at Districts in Apple Valley, advancing only Matt Minister to States, most agreed that the overall accomplishments of the team were very impressive. Andy Belknap commented, "Even though we fell short on a couple of our goals, I believe we still had a lot of fun and a very successful season." Greg Fisher received 1st team All O.C.C., while Scott King, Matt Minister, and Andy Belknap earned 2nd team honors. Shawn Owens qualified for Honorable Mention. In the State meet, Matt Minister shot 155 for an incredible 3rd place, after leading the first day. He summed up the season by stating, "This team as a whole was very close, and together we had many good rounds. It just didn't work out for us in the big matches. But this program is great and will prosper in the next few years."

by Scott Cebul



Taking time out from his intense match to smile for the camera is co-captain Greg Fisher. His outstanding play landed him on the All O.C.C. first team.

Golfer wannabe Andy Minister shows the form and skills that made him decide to stick with soccer. Doesn't that course look familiar? Andy also seems to be a bit confused about golfing apparel. And last, doesn't he know you're supposed to use a club and not a stick?

Matt Minister camouflages his deep rooted fears about the upcoming match with a tiny smile and a slight flick of the wrist.

At a pep rally in the fall, the golf captains are applauded for their hard work and successful season., especially Matt Minister, who placed third individually in States after leading the first day.

This Cardinal golfer wants to hit the perfect shot on to the green. But the pressure to succeed is great when you consider the huge gallery that's looking on.

BEYOND

The Record

Just when it seemed that girls' volleyball was on the rise in Worthington , the squad had to deal with the opening of a new high school. The Lady Cards, under the direction of first-year head coach Karen Kochheiser made the most of what they had and completed a positive season. Despite a lack of success in the win-loss column the Cardinals never lost their sense of determination and dedication. The positive attitude carried the team throughout the year.

Youth and inexperience were other obstacles that the Cardinals had to deal with this season. As the season wore on many younger players demonstrated the improvements they had made as a result of gaining varsity experience. In the words of Team-Captain Cindy Morris, "Many people felt that having such a young team was a great obstacle. But like any obstacle, it can and was overcome. Nobody knows that better than Dublin!" Look for the Cards next season to improve as younger players continue to mature and work hard.

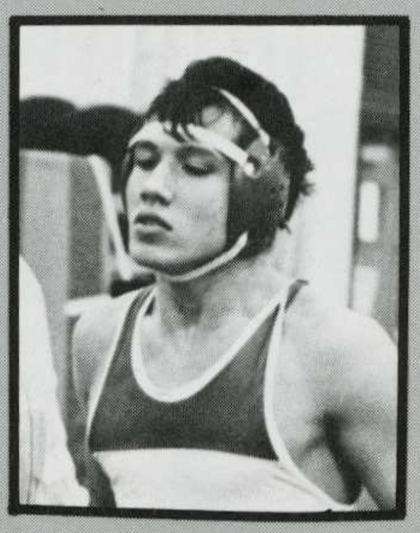
-John Reed



TAKEN DOWN
to the wire

The Cardinal Wrestling Team again fielded a lot of talent in the 1991-92 season. What many opponents thought would be a weak squad after the split, turned into a pleasant surprise for first year coach Bob Galasso. Led by captains Ben Madia, John Reed, and Tom Reider, the Cards compiled a 3-3-1 record overall and a 2-2-1 record in the very competitive O.C.C. This mark was good enough for a third place finish. Highlights for the season included an impressive first O.C.C. win over Westerville South, an exciting 26-26 tie with a tough Dublin team, and a second place finish in our own Cardinal Tournament. The team also placed fifth in Districts and 12th in Sectionals.

There were several bright spots individually on this year's team. In the league, Ben Madia, 130 pounds, and John Reed, 140 pounds, received first team honors. At heavyweight, Sophomore Rusty Waring earned second team, and at 112 pounds, Tom Reider was named Honorable Mention. In the Sectionals, Madia was champion at 125 pounds, Reed placed second at 140 pounds, and Waring placed third at heavyweight. In the District Tournament, Madia once again proved he was better than the competition by taking the championship and Waring improved on his Sectional showing to take second. These placings allowed Madia and Waring to advance to the State Tournament. Although luck wasn't on the Cards' side in States, as neither was able to place in the top three, the 1991-92 season proved to be a very successful start to Thomas Worthington wrestling.

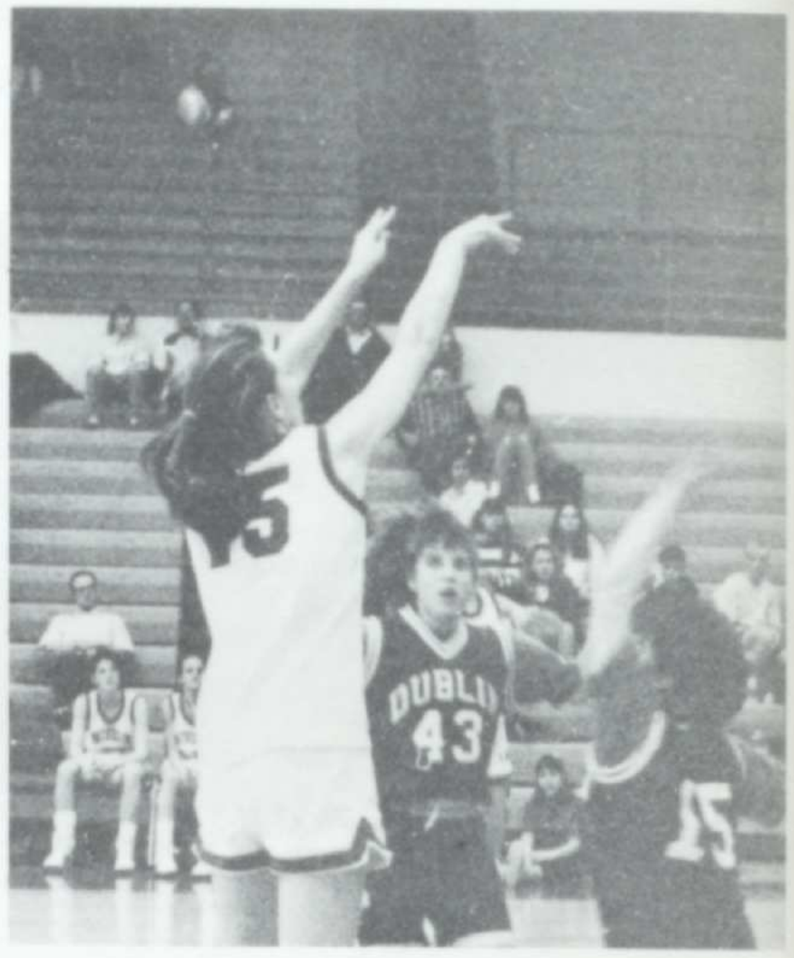
Cards Give It Their BEST SHOT

People expected the 1991-92 Lady Cardinal basketball team to feel the effects of losing many outstanding players from the previous year's O.C.C. Championship team . After graduation and the opening of a new high school, the Cards found themselves with just three returning letter winners and a new coach. However, somebody must have forgotten to tell the team that they were not supposed to be competitive this winter. Coach Kathy Narmont and the team's four seniors led the Cards through a season during which they were continually improving, and, above all, remaining competitive. Although the Cards struggled in non-league games, they were a force to reckon with in the O.C.C. At the end of the conference schedule, the team had to settle for third place. However, they were fighting for second and possibly even a repeat championship well into the season. The leadership of Seniors Nikki Warren, Lisa Wendt, Liza Canales and Alyssa Dick were instrumental in creating an atmosphere on the team where younger players could step up and make a contribution. The Cardinals had many younger players who improved greatly throughout the winter. Unfortunately, the Cardinals' hopes for a strong post season showing were ruined when they were faced with the formidable task of facing perennial power, Pickerington, in the first round. Coach Narmont is optimistic about the squad's hopes for next season. The Lady Cardinals will return a host of letter-winners including senior-to-be Becky Kaiser, who was awarded honorable mention All-League this year. Senior Liza Canales received an honorable mention to round out post season honors. With the competitive, fighting spirit that was a trademark of the team this year, along with the benefit of returning a strong corps of letter winners, the Lady Cardinals will be a team to watch in the future.



Before Dublin's players can collect themselves, Alyssa Dick already has her eyes on scoring a basket for the Cards.
Alyssa kept the Shamrocks on their toes all evening long.

It's no problem for Senior Lisa Wendt to shoot over Dublin's players. The shot seems to have caught Liza Canales off guard.

Diamonds In The ROUGH

Despite a somewhat disappointing year as far as wins and losses are concerned, the Cardinals' basketball season was, in many ways, a positive experience. The team was led by Junior shooting guard, Dimitrious Stanley, who was honored as a First-Team All O.C.C. selection. The team also had several younger players make contributions. In particular, Sophomore point guard Greg Giessler, and Freshman power forward Brian Blankenship, were two younger players who gained valuable varsity experience this winter. Senior Jon Olsen was awarded an honorable mention All-League selection. The team also harbored the O.C.C. Scholar Athlete of the year in Senior Tim Senff. The O.C.C. Scholar Athlete Award is given to the player who epitomizes the best in athletics as well as scholarly pursuits in the league.

The Cardinals completed the year with an overall record of 8-13. The season included many close games, and it seems as if with a little luck the Cardinals' record could very easily have been 13-8. The highlight of the season for Coach Miller was when the Cardinals pulled out a quadruple overtime victory against Dublin. Freshman Brian Blankenship came through in the fourth extra period with a last second basket. With so many young and experienced players returning next season, the Cardinals can look forward to a bright future.

The Lady Cards' gymnastics team carried on their winning tradition at Thomas Worthington High School this year. Defeating strong teams such as DeSales in the regular season prepared them for the district tournament. Throughout the season the Lady Cards scored between a 130 and a 133. However, in the district tournament the Cards wanted to better their old scores. By focusing on their own routines and not watching the other teams compete, the Lady Cards scored a 139.1, the highest score ever in their district tournament. It was not this excellent score, however, that made this tournament so memorable, but the fact that they beat their fierce rival, Upper Arlington.

Luck was not with the Lady Cards at the State meet. Coming into the meet, the team thought they had a chance for first or second place, however, third place was all the Cards could grasp. The team scored a respectable 136 but the competition from Rocky River Magnificat and Upper Arlington was too tough to defeat. A feeling of disappointment was inevitable, but these gymnasts should be proud of their many accomplishments. A solid 43-5 record was posted by the Lady Cards and several girls received individual honors including Christy Nigh, Kristen Hemmerly, and Laura Clark.

Making Adjustments

Like many other Worthington athletic teams, the boys' gymnastics team suffered when the schools split. However, the team, led by Captains Nick Parrish and Jasper Liu, was determined to find success. In a unified spirit, Worthington Kilbourne High School and Thomas Worthington High School decided to practice together. However, the two teams competed separately since they are considered two different schools.

Obviously, the school split divided the members of last year's gymnastics team between Kilbourne and Thomas Worthington. Many gymnasts were asked to compete in numerous events whereas last year the members had specialized events in which they competed. Team Manager, Scott Kern, commented, "Because everyone had to compete all around, the members were forced to stretch and challenge themselves, which made them better competitors." A solid 19-5 record is proof enough that these gymnasts did find success.

Flying Through the Water

With Head Coach Jim Callahan managing both the Thomas Worthington and Worthington Kilbourne teams, the swimmers were given responsibilities to help unite the teams and make the season run as smoothly as possible. Sharing the natatorium between both schools forced the Cardinals and the Wolves to cooperate and work together. Dealing with limited pool space was only one of the disadvantages of having two teams practicing at the same time. Senior Pam Beim stated, "It was difficult to get used to at first. It was very crowded and often times we weren't able to receive the individual attention that we hoped for. At away meets we were accompanied by our assistant coach while our head coach remained at the home meets with the Kilbourne Wolves. Only at our few home meets were we able to fully appreciate and respect the leadership of Head Coach Jim Callahan."

Even with these obstacles, the Cardinals pulled off an excellent season. The swimmers finished with a dual record of 8-1 and advanced more than half of the team to Districts. At this year's District meet, the swimmers placed second to Upper Arlington and diver Sharon Wong was the 1992 District Champion. The Cardinals qualified 5 swimmers and 1 diver for the State meet, including Courtney Gibson, Amanda Helter, Erin LaBuda, Amanda Stark, Pam Beim, and diver Sharon Wong. Although the swimmers didn't leave the State Meet as satisfied as they hoped, Junior Sharon Wong dove spectacularly and placed eighth. This ended the season of patience and sacrifices for the newly split Cardinal Swim Team.

Overcoming a Major Change

This year was one of the most unusual seasons for the Boys' Swimming team. Not only did the boys share Coach Jim Callahan with Worthington Kilbourne's team, but also the swimmers had only one Senior and Captain, Eric Sears, to help lead the team. Difficult as it was with only one senior, the Cardinals still managed to complete an excellent season.

At the beginning of the year, the Cards faced some difficult meets. However, through teamwork and intense training, many outstanding team performances were logged. The Cardinals were runners up to Arlington at the District Meet and advanced several swimmers to States. The boys 200 free relay consisting of Nick Popa, Jade Brandenburg, Ryan McKinley, and Jay Page just missed returning for finals and placing in the top 12. It was a difficult year for the Cardinals to adjust to at first, but, in the end, many well-earned goals were achieved.

EXCELLENT

Tradition Lives On

The legend of success in women's lacrosse was carried on this year by Thomas Worthington. Meeting a difficult schedule the team finished the season at 13-3. At the end of the season the team traveled to Pittsburgh for the Midwest Tournament. In the first round they lost to the 1992 Midwest championship team, Hathaway Brown. The best they could do after this disappointing loss was fifth place, which they successfully achieved. Overall for the tournament they were 3-1. Co-captains Amy Porta and Alison McCarthy were both named to the Midwest All-Star Team. Porta also earned a spot on the National All-Star Team which took her to the University of Maryland to play for the Midwest. Deservingly, Porta was named "Most Valuable Player" by her teammates. Other team awards were: Alison McCarthy-"Best Defense", Shelly Kerschner-"Best Attack", Mary Gilmore-"Most Improved", and Kelly Moran-"Most Spirited". At the team banquet, Kelly Moran and Amy Mueller were named co-captains for the 1993 season.

The junior varsity teams also had successful seasons with JV Red finishing 8-4 and JV Blue finishing 3-2-2. The potential of the freshmen and the developing talents of the sophomores and juniors give evidence of continuing success for the future of TWHS Women's Lacrosse.

The Cardinal boys' lacrosse team came into 1992 with an uncertainty about what the future held. They had lost half their lettermen to Worthington Kilbourne and another handful to graduation. As the season began, though, there was still an air of confidence about the Cards. This confidence grew as the Cards steam rolled opponents en route to a 14-0 record. Included in this span was a thrilling 8-7 overtime victory over defending Midwest champion Sewickley. Senior Craig Kahoun stated, "That game changed our season. It was really an emotional boost to win after being down 6-2. We finally started to believe we could be a successful team." In the Cardinals' 15th game they met Brother Rice, also undefeated, for the Midwest regular season crown. Three hours after the opening whistle, the Cards emerged victorious 8-7. Next stop was the Midwest tournament.

After dispatching U.A. 15-7 in the semi-finals, the Cards were to collide with Cincinnati Moeller, whom they defeated earlier 13-8. Although the game was close early on, this was not to be the Cards' day. Moeller exploded in the 2nd quarter and never looked back en route to a 15-9 victory. This loss cost the Cards the Midwest title but the state tournament was still to come.

The boys' stickers returned to victory road with wins over Hilliard and Western Reserve to set up a rematch with Moeller for the State crown. Unfortunately, the Crusaders again proved too strong for the Cards, taking the state championship 10-5. Senior John Lyon commented, "It was really tough to come so close to both titles and then come up empty. But I know when I look back on our 17-2 record in the future, I'll think of this season as a success." Several of the team members received honors. Craig Kahoun, Scott Cebul, John Lyon, and Andy Leier earned 1st team All-Midwest honors, while Ryan Pirnat received 2nd team and Tom Mostyn was named Honorable Mention. Craig Kahoun was also named Midwest Player of the Year.

PROMISE

Despite Defeat

Attitude rose above record for the 1992 softball Cardinals. Despite going 3-14 during the season, these lady Cards had many highlights which made this season memorable. After losing their first 11 games, the Cards finished the last six games at .500 (3-3). Included in these games was a 24-8 win over Mifflin in the opening round of the sectional tournament. A week later, the Cards again tasted victory with a 19-2 trouncing of Linden McKinley. These victories were not only well enjoyed by the team, but served as a confidence booster for the younger players as they head into the 1993 season. Not much was expected out of the 1992 team and new head coach Dan Spears, but the Cards proved some doubters wrong. They improved on the 1991 team record despite losing half their lettermen to Kilbourne. Young players stepped up and made a major contribution. Besides that, the Cards lost only one starter to graduation. These facts lead this sports writer to believe that a strong softball squad looms on the Cardinal horizon. This season also had some Cards receiving honors. Senior Shannon Hager was named All-O.C.C. first team and the O.C.C. Scholar-Athlete of the year. Junior Carrie Cave also made honors being named to the O.C.C. second team.

Talent

Not Enough

The 1992 baseball team had the potential to be great. Many of the players had been playing together for at least nine years and a special closeness was present among this team. Friendship and closeness was not all that this team had going for it, talent was also a major factor. Many of the players, including Bill Michael, Matt Chidley, Derrin Ritchie, Chris Torrens, Marc Amos, and Andy Belknap were returning lettermen. Senior captain, Chris Torrens, was named Honorable Mention All OCC during his junior year. However, despite all of the talent that was present, nothing ever clicked within the team.

Although the team started strong and won several games in a row, the rest of the season was disappointing. Many of the players commented that the baseball team was always close to winning but they could never come up with the victory. Individuals, however, were rewarded for their outstanding play. Chris Torrens was named 1st team All OCC, Andy Belknap was named 2nd team All OCC, and Dave Macer was named Honorable Mention All OCC.

SIDE OUT

SPELLS VICTORIES

The 1992 volleyball season was marked by the determination and hard work of a strong class of senior spikers. After several successful years, the team was faced with the challenge, of not only filling the shoes of last years' seniors, but dealing with a program that was still feeling the affects of the opening of Worthington Kilbourne High School. The squad met the challenge with a positive attitude. Off-season work-outs became routine as the team worked together to improve.

As seniors, as well as team-captains, Jon Kerr, Greg Spillman and Rob Kincaid were instrumental in providing leadership for the Cards. The spikers completed the year with a record of twelve wins and six losses. This was good enough to take third place in the O.C.C. Although the cards had hoped to advance further in the state tournmament according to Coach Mankovecky the season on the whole must be considered a success. The Cardinals harbored two District All-Stars in Greg Spillman and Rob Kincaid. As volleyball continues to grow as a new varsity sport at Thomas Worthington High School, we hope that the work ethic demonstrated by this team will become part of a winning tradition.

While waving goodbye to his girlfriend, Jon Kerr happens to make a smashing success as he accidentally spikes the volleyball. Meanwhile senior captain Greg Spillman intimidates the competition by showing just why he has a black belt in karate.

Led by coaches Nancy Beattie and Gary Smith, the 1992 Girls' Track Team completed another excellent season. The team was fortunate to have five senior captains, consisting of Kristen Gaddis, Gretchen Huestis, Alison Lowe, Lani Veach, and Lisa Wendt. Under their leadership, the Cards were runners-up in the OCC and also captured Thomas Worthington's first Regional title.

Perhaps the most exciting contribution to the season was the new school record set by freshman Alyson Butterfield. She placed third individually in the 3200 meter run at the State Meet with a time of 10:52.40 and was also the anchor of the 3200 meter relay with Joanna Finch, Nancy Hood, and Emily Hood, which placed second at States. The girls ended up placing eleventh in the State overall.

The Lady Cardinals also individually picked up many post-season honors. Four runners earned first team All-OCC honors, eight earned second team recognition, and four received honorable mention. Among the All-District selections were Alyson Butterfield, Amelia Croft, Joanna Finch, Kristen Gaddis, Emily Hood, Nancy Hood, and Lani Veach. Sophomore Claire McKee was also named to the All-District second team. In addition, Kristen Gaddis was named OCC Scholar Athlete for track.

Although the seniors will be missed, the team is excited at the prospect of seeing the younger runners reaching their full potential in the years to come. Best of luck and let the tradition of success continue.

Running

With Confidence

This year's track season was truly inspirational to all of the runners. Competion in track has always been tough and to gain a spot on the varsity team as a young runner was virtually impossible. However, this year's track team was incredibly young and inexperienced. This did not stand in the Card's way though. With the guidance of a new coaching staff, including new Head Coach Alan Hostettler, the young athletes realized that they could compete with the more experienced athletes. The veteran track members were forced to run in more events than usual in order to be competitive in the meets.

Once again the relay teams proved to be the strong point of the track team, finishing first or second most of the time. The 400 meter relay team, composed of Jon Mesloh, Tom Worthington, Dimitrious Stanley, Jason Graniere, and Keji Fujiyoshi, claimed many victories and had the chance to run in the state compition. The other sprinting relay team, composed of Mesloh, Worthington, Stanley, and Graniere, also dominated in their race. Finally, the 3200 relay team, composed of Aaron Turano, Andy Beuter, Brian DeRose, and Jeremy Croy, proved to be another strong asset. Victories, however, did not only come from the relay teams, many individuals also helped the track team. Although the field events members were few, they too contributed to the team's success.

Captains Aaron Turano, Tom Worthington, Roy Teti, and Qwann Wood, along with other senior members encouraged the younger athletes to strive for excellence, and to never settle for anything less.

A Smashing Good Season

Led by the 1992 OCC Coach of the Year, Sandy Ferris, the boys' tennis team ended with a remarkable season. Under the leadership of co-captains Sam Parekh and Ben Hock, the Cardinals finished with an OCC record of 5-0.

Going into the OCC tournament the Cards' record was close to that of Gahanna and Westerville South. Sam Parekh stated after concluding the tournament, "We were confident that we had the ability to the win the tournament because we were leading all along. However, we didn't want to lose concentration. Up until the final match everyone played their best to bring us a strong earned victory of the OCC Tournament title." Ben Hock, Oliver Chuang, and Per Sverdrup were named first team all-OCC and Sam Parekh was named first court second team all-OCC.

The Cardinals qualified Sam Parekh and doubles partners, Ben Hock and Jeff Shaner, for Districts. Ben and Jeff faced a difficult first round match and were knocked out of the tournament. Singles player Sam Parekh was seeded 6th, beat the 4th and 5th seeds, and finished 4th in the tournament. Unfortunately this was the first year the the District tournament only took the top 3 instead of 4 place finishes for States.

Overall it was an excellent season for the tennis Cardinals. Coach Ferris sums it up by saying, "Considering our extremely competitive schedule, the 10-6 winning record was outstanding. The guys were excellent tennis players with a lot of team spirit."

by Amanda Stark

Per Sverdrup anxiously awaits the upcoming slam.

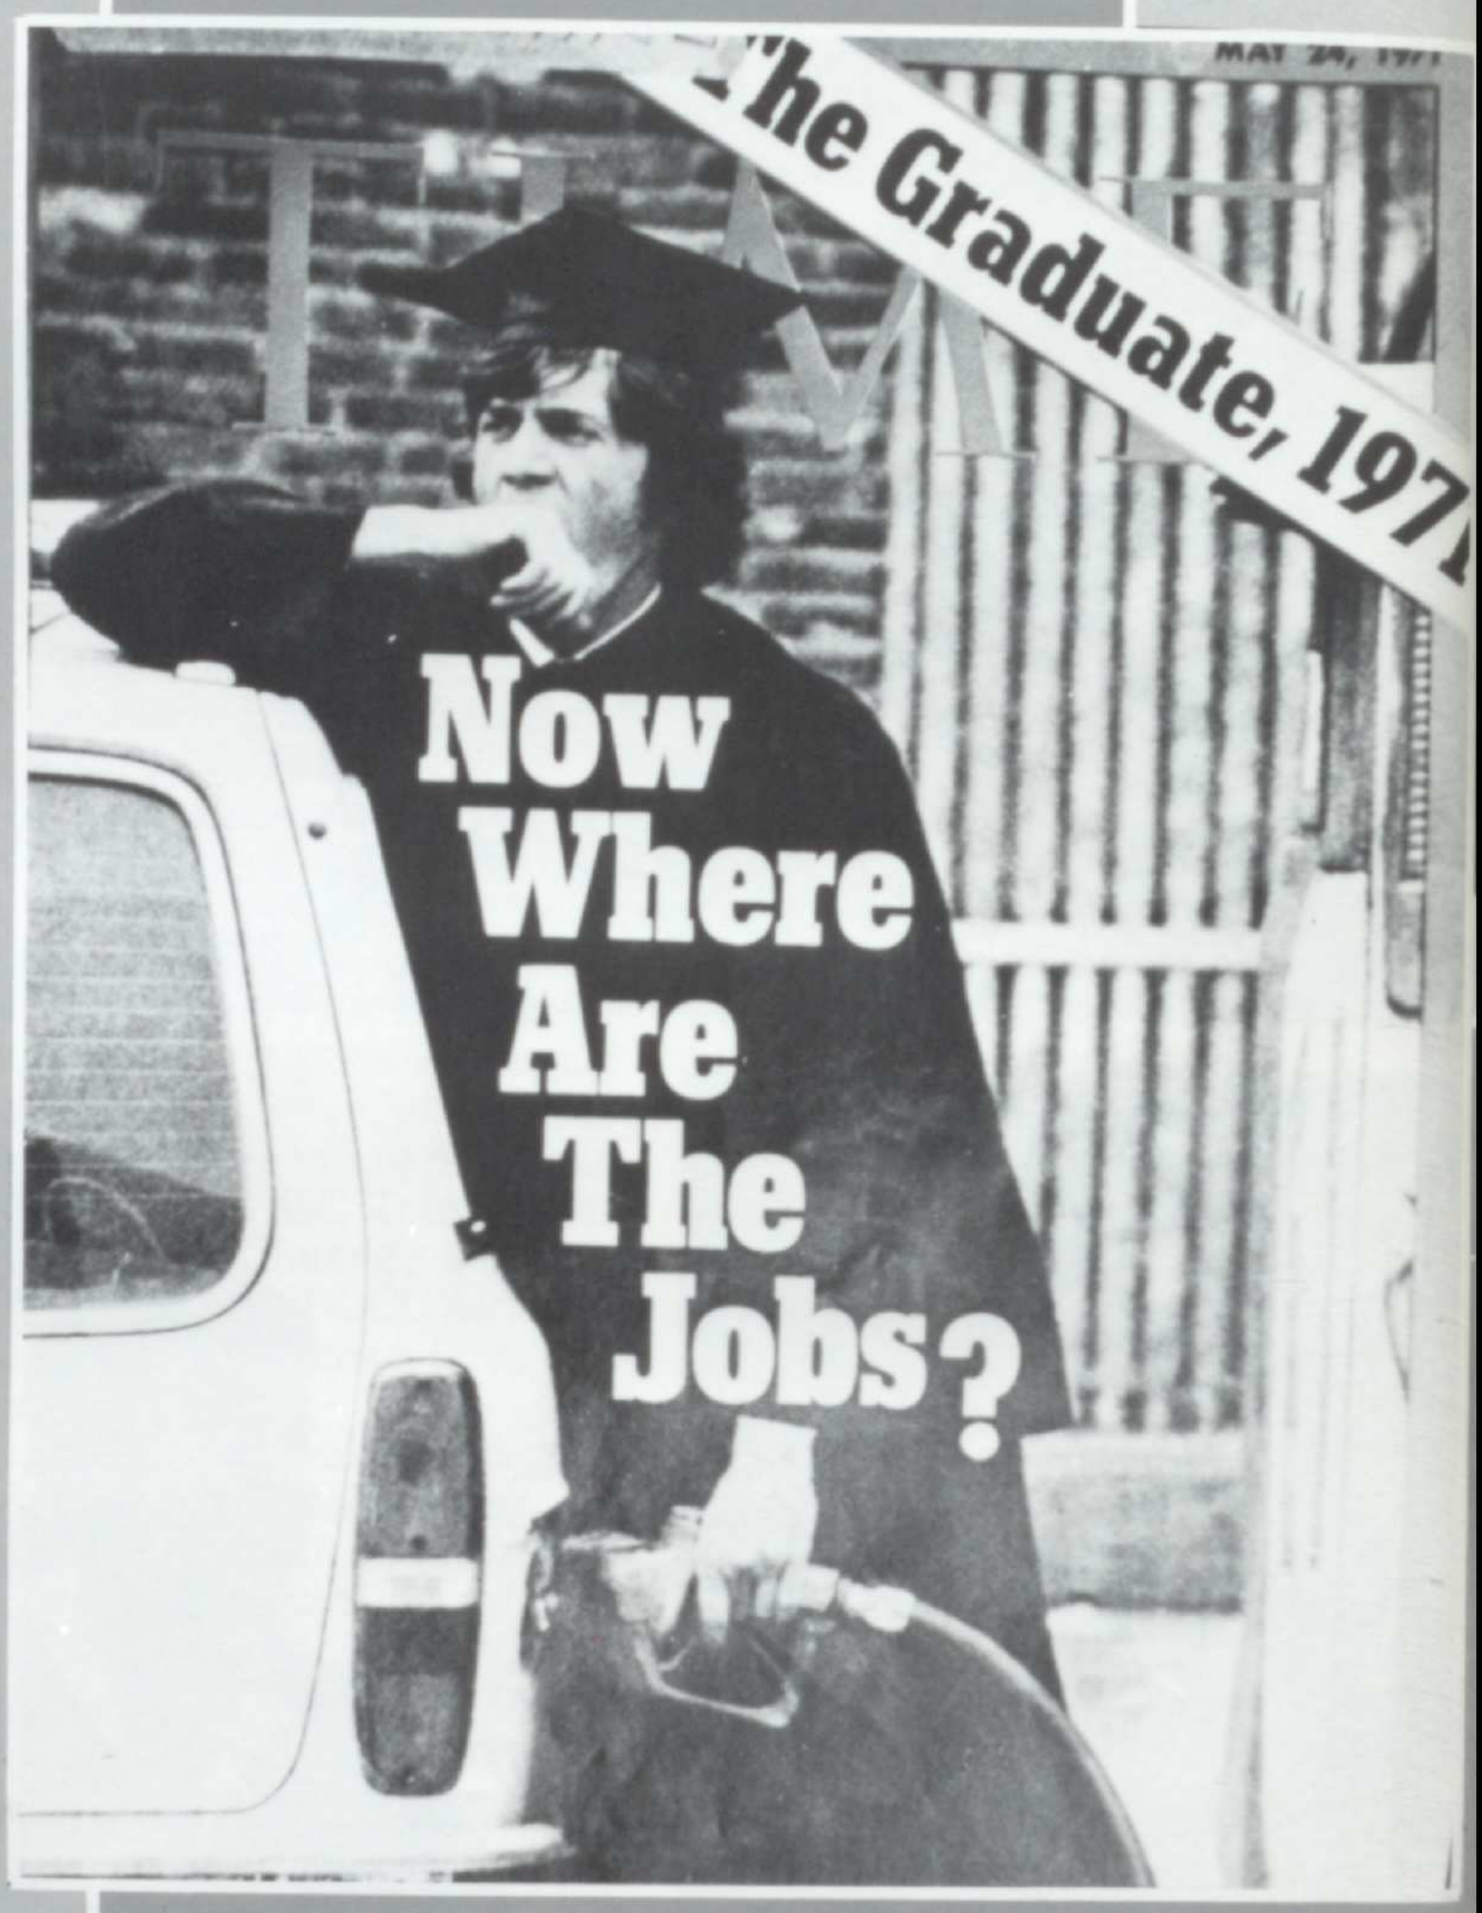
Jeff Shaner stares at Sam Parekh in amazement while behind them Per Sverdrup and Sean Velie refuse to look at the camera. At least Oliver Chuang shows some excitement about getting his picture taken.

Faculty

What's the Point?

Nonconformist by nature, Mrs. Fish avoids the stereotypical hippie costume by sporting a plaid shirt and red bow. Mrs. Stark and Mrs. McKim allow Mrs. Fish to tag along, on the condition that she not mimic exactly their actions. Thus, Mrs. Fish gives the peace signal with the left hand and not the right.

Yes, that is Mr. Fuller gnawing away at his hand on the cover of Time magazine. No, it isn't one of those magazine covers you buy at King's Island, or the Fair. Mr. Fuller did not let the attention go to his head however, and prudently declined to do further spreads for magazines like Ranger Rick, Mad, Popular Mechanics, Playgirl.....



Glenda the Good Witch, also known as Mrs. Brown, wisely selects a costume she can wear again and again. The wand also triples as a pointer and vice of torture.

Confused about recent construction changes, custodian George Bester isn't quite sure which way to go with that cart full of Popular Science magazines.

Our Faithful Librarian

Mrs. Taracuk has been a dependable librarian at TWHS for eight years. She is always busy with reference work, ordering new books and audio-visual materials, and distributing equipment such as TVs and VCRs to teachers who need them.

As if these responsibilities are not enough, Mrs. Taracuk is also involved in numerous extra-curricular activities. She takes part in cheerleading and Cardinal Club, and is an advisor for the Cardinal Mascot. In her spare time, she walks, lifts weights, and, of course, reads.

Mrs. Taracuk points out that the libraries of the past were just books, but now books are only a small part of them. She is excited about continuing to work as a team with Mrs. Odgers and using the new library which opened in April. It has expanded services, such as the info tracs and more computers, a classroom, a video switch system, and simply more space.

The Spirit Committee

The Spirit Committee is a club organized by staff members,whose purpose is to ensure the morale of the faculty at TWHS remains high. Eleven vivacious volunteers, Duane Butler, Dave Reigel, Debbie Rossi, Larry Hutchinson, Christine Banks, Jan Myers, Pat Stegman, Marilyn Hamilton, Jim McElligott, Krista Taracuk, and Gen Knoff have dedicated their precious time to make up this year's Spirit Committee. These members meet periodically throughout the year to plan exciting activities for staff and their families. At the beginning of the year, the Spirit Committee attended a potluck dinner at Mrs. Rossi's house to plan the activities for the remainder of the school year. Some of the activities the Spirit Committee sponsors include: school luncheons, hayrides for staff and their families, various Halloween events, family sledding, a chili cook-off, and a staff Gallery Hop. "It is a great time and I will definitely be on the Spirit Committee next year!" exclaims Mrs. Rossi. Our hats go off to these dedicated staff members.

The New and Improved Guidance Department

The Guidance Department has had several changes this year. Along with the office renovations, which enlarged and made the office more workable, there have also been changes in the staff and new programs.

There are two new guidance counselors, Mrs. Geyer and Mr. Cellar. They help Dr. Brumfield, Mr. Valentine, and Mrs. Meyers who chose to stay at TWHS. Aside from helping students with schedules, personal problems, and planning life after high school, the guidance department also offers seminars during lunch periods to aid students in writing college applications, applying for financial aid, and other potential student concerns.

Dr. Brumfield, who is the Chairperson of Guidance this year, has the additional responsibilities of sorting piles of mail daily, talking with parents of prospective Worthington students, and doing what is necessary to run the department.

Guidance has proven to be the place to turn for answers in many aspects of life. The counselors' philosophy is summed up best by Dr. Brumfield who says, "Working with students is the best part of my job."

The Basement Treasures

The Academic Assistants

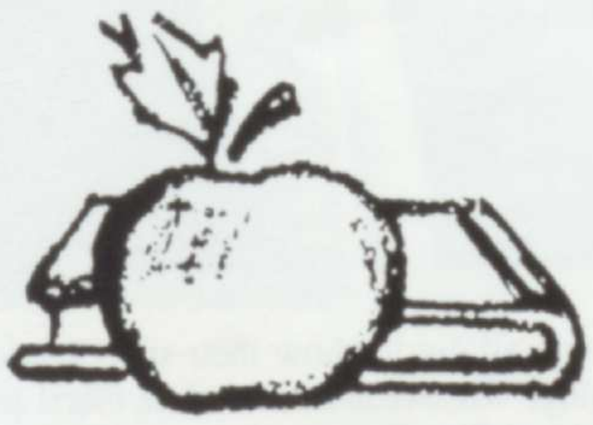
Unfortunately, four of the most helpful faculty members at TWHS go virtually unrecognized. The Academic Assistants are the saviors who spend their day helping students with their confusing homework assignments. The four dedicated assistants are Kerry Rubadue, Erik Thompson, Donna Johnson, and Carolyn Lake.

Kerry Rubadue is a 1983 Worthington graduate. She had Mr. Duane Butler for Geometry and remembers that his popular nickname was Dwangle. We can thank her senior class for starting the girls' participation in senior shirts. Mrs. Rubadue graduated from OSU in 1990, where she was chosen to present a paper to the NCTE conference in Chicago that same year, and has been the English Academic Assistant for two years.

Erik Thompson, a 1987 Worthington graduate, is now the Math Academic Assistant and the publicity advisor for drama at WKHS. He had a journal article published in the December, 1990 issue of The National Association of Secondary School Principles.

Donna Johnson is a 1975 Worthington graduate whose parents, grandparents, and great grandparents also graduated from WHS. She taught History in Akron for six years and is now the Social Studies Academic Assistant. She has her hands full at home raising her two sons.

Carolyn Lake is the Science Academic Assistant and a BES teacher. She became a zoo keeper at the Columbus Zoo where she worked in the Trained Elephants Program. She also enjoys spending time with her son.



Guided Studies for Success

Guided Studies for Success was created to provide assistance to students, especially sophomores, who received low scores on the Proficiency Tests, are having difficulty organizing their time, or simply need to better develop their study skills.

Mr. Matt Chrispin teaches the Guided Studies for Success class and is also available during lunch periods, study halls, and after school to help students. He requires that each student keeps an assignment book which their parents sign daily. This keeps the parents involved in their son or daughter's school work.

Mr. Chrispin graduated from Ohio Dominican College with a major in History. He is the assistant football coach at WKHS and the assistant shot and discus coach for Track and Field at TWHS. He also enjoys spending time with his wife and three year old son.

The Write Place

This is the third year English teachers have volunteered their free periods to help people with their writing. Not only can students come to the Write Place for help regarding their English papers and college essays, but the community is also invited to seek help here. The teachers help college students with papers and adults with resumes or speeches.

Students ar TWHS come to the Write Place to receive help from someone other than their own teacher; someone not involved in grading. The only complaint the teachers have is that some students consider it a "drop off service," and expect their papers to be corrected while they go to lunch or are in a class. The purpose of the Write Place is for the teacher and student to read through the assignment and make the correct changes together.

The Reading Lab

The Reading Lab is is a place for students to go for extra help on their reading assignments in any subject. It is administered by Mrs. Hamilton during lunch periods. All teachers are encouraged to send their students to the lab for reading intervention. Unfortunately, this lab is rarely visited.

Mrs. Hamilton also teaches Effective Reading and Reading Workshop at both TWHS and WKHS.

Mrs. Hamilton enjoys reading and spending time with her husband and daughter, who is a senior at WKHS. Mrs. Hamilton earned her Masters in Early to Middle Child Development from OSU in 1990.

Who does Mr. McElligott's laundry?

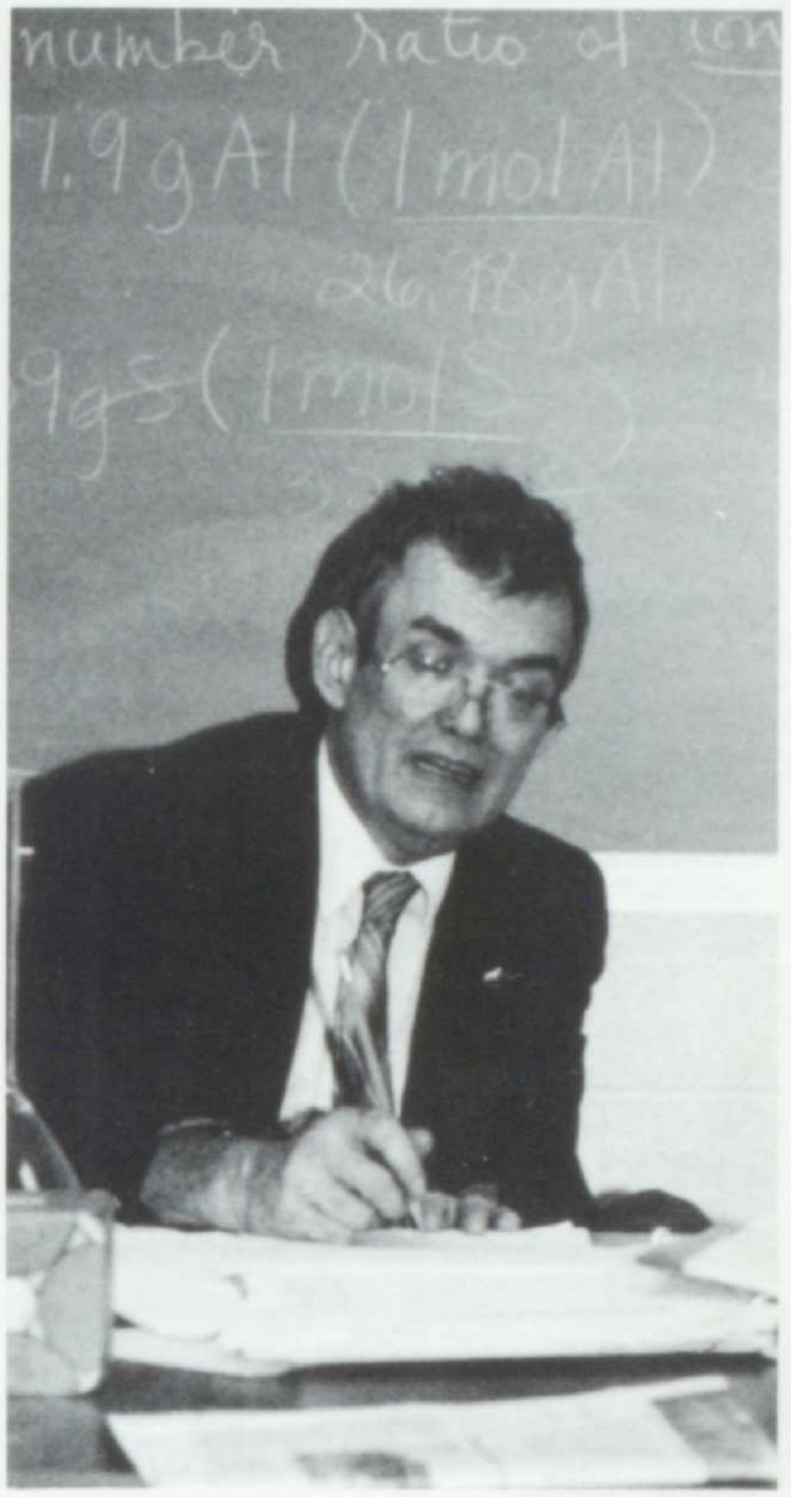
Going all out to show their school spirit, Mr. Luthy, Mr. Pinnicks, and Ms. Gerst pose on Red and Blue Day.

At her desk, Mrs. Elder willingly assists Steph Olson with her Spanish homework.



Students finish their homework on moles while Mr. Andrews intently grades papers.

Is it Halloween or is Mrs. Beattie really Cinderella?

"La paix, l'amour, et le rock and roll," says Ms. Armitage on Hippie Day.

Thank You!!!

Mrs. Ferris is caught pigging out during a special faculty only luncheon.

We would like to extend a personal thank you to all staff members who have kept the environment at Thomas Worthington educational and fun. Every one of you has worked to make the transition successful. You have spent an extraordinary amount of time educating and encouraging us and we would like you to know how much each and every student appreciates your hard work and dedication.

Junior Rachel Miller feels that teachers try to make classes interesting. "My teachers really get involved. They are willing to stay after school or come in before school to help as much as possible," Freshman Lauren Ross thinks she is "lucky to have helpful teachers who make classes exciting."

Many of the graduating Seniors are sad to be leaving the school they have attended for four years. Eric Chivington expresses a universal sentiment when he says, "TWHS has been a home away from home for me. It will be very difficult to say good - bye to the staff members who have been such a big part of my life for the past four years."

With evil intentions, Mr. Holl distracts his student from his homework with a sub.

Sincerely,

Cindy Johnston

Emily Geiger

In Remebrance Of

Christopher Rummell

August 26, 1974 - January 19, 1992

Chris seemed larger than life to some. He was nearly 6'4" and wore size 12 shoes. But under that ball cap, short sleeved shirt and shorts was an emotional, free thinking young man. He was rough on his shoes, clothes, and his golf clubs. (However, he never met a refrigerator he didn't like.) He was also the kid who cried at the end of E.T., helped his sister make sand castles and surprised his parents by cleaning his room without being told.

He loved the earth - from backpacking, camping out and sunsets to the things that run across the landscape-Lamborghinis, Mercedes, skateboards, bikes, Pinewood Derby Racers, rollerblades, his first big wheel, roller coasters, trains, Mickey Mouse, slot cars, remote control cars, pot-bellied pigs, sleds and skis. His favorite states were Florida, California, and anywhere he could ski or swim.

In the water he would snorkle, boogieboard, dive for koosh balls, canoe and fish forever. Combining dirt and water, when he played soccer, he was a true "mudder."

He filled the air with golf, volley, tennis, basket, table tennis and lacrosse balls, kites, rockets, an occasional swear word, frisbees, badminton birds, a great laugh, Heavy "D" and the Boyz, The Beatles, B-Bs, The Columbus Dispatch, piano and trumpet notes, "Married with Children," "In Living Color," and "Cheers."

His favorite holidays were ones that got him out of school, involved presents - getting and giving - and candy. He loved fireworks on the 4th of July, coloring Easter eggs, blowing out candles, opening surprise packages, scaring the life out of kids and their mothers on Halloween, hanging Christmas tree ornaments and making the yearly snail out of Christmas cookie dough.

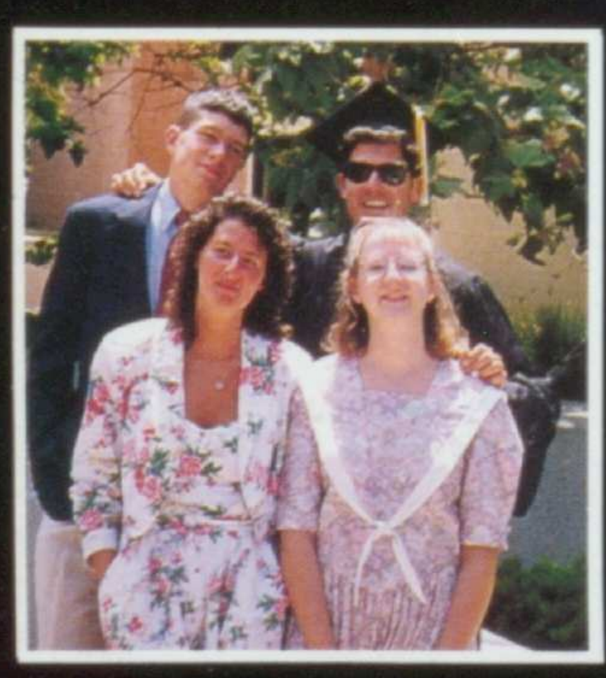
The sports Chris didn't play, he watched intently. He loved the Buffalo Bills, the L.A. Lakers, the L.A. Dodgers, Worthington football and basketball, and Ohio State anything. He followed Syracuse University, the Columbus Chill, U.C.L.A., the Florida Gators, and the University of Michigan. Sports Illustrated was his bible. He went to the Columbus "500" on a too cold day but did not complain. His Air Jordans were beat up but they took him to school, his friends' homes and sporting events.

His other loves included woodworking, frequent haircuts, his room, "Faulty Towers," slime, Nintendo,"Black Adder," Fahrvergnugen, croquet, all his friends at both high schools, beating his father at anything, dressing up, pool, chess, checkers, Outburst, Pictionary, Labyrinth, cards, pin ball machines, Hermit Crabs, all seasons, dogs, study hall, Pepsi, getting out of French, Calvin and Hobbs, The Far Side, his inherited Playboys, pizza, being with big brother, zoos, Polo, anything, and radar detectors.

Chris loved life and nearly everything in it. Only two things can be accounted for that he disliked - Plymouth Horizons and cats. He packed a lot of living into 17 years. To paraphrase the words of a song by another Chris - Christopher Cross - "When you remember Chris, laugh, don't cry, you know he'd want it that way."

By Mrs. Rummel

Chris enjoyed skiing. Here, Chris was on a ski trip with his youth group from St. John's Methodist Church.



Chris with brother and sisters.

Painting the rock, a tradition borrowed from Thomas Worthington, symbolized our mourning over the loss of Chris.

Even at a young age, Chris showed an interest in sports.

Above: Valiantly saved by his peers just moments before attempting to plunge off the highest bleacher, Josh Mendell reconsiders his incredible self-worth.

Above: Having become all too attached to a high power position, Eileen Johnson desperately clings to the symbol of her monarchial status.

CLASS

Below Center: Our lonely punter Dustin Swinehart.

Right: Will someone please tell Shelly Kerschner that there is shampoo on the market that prevents green hair.

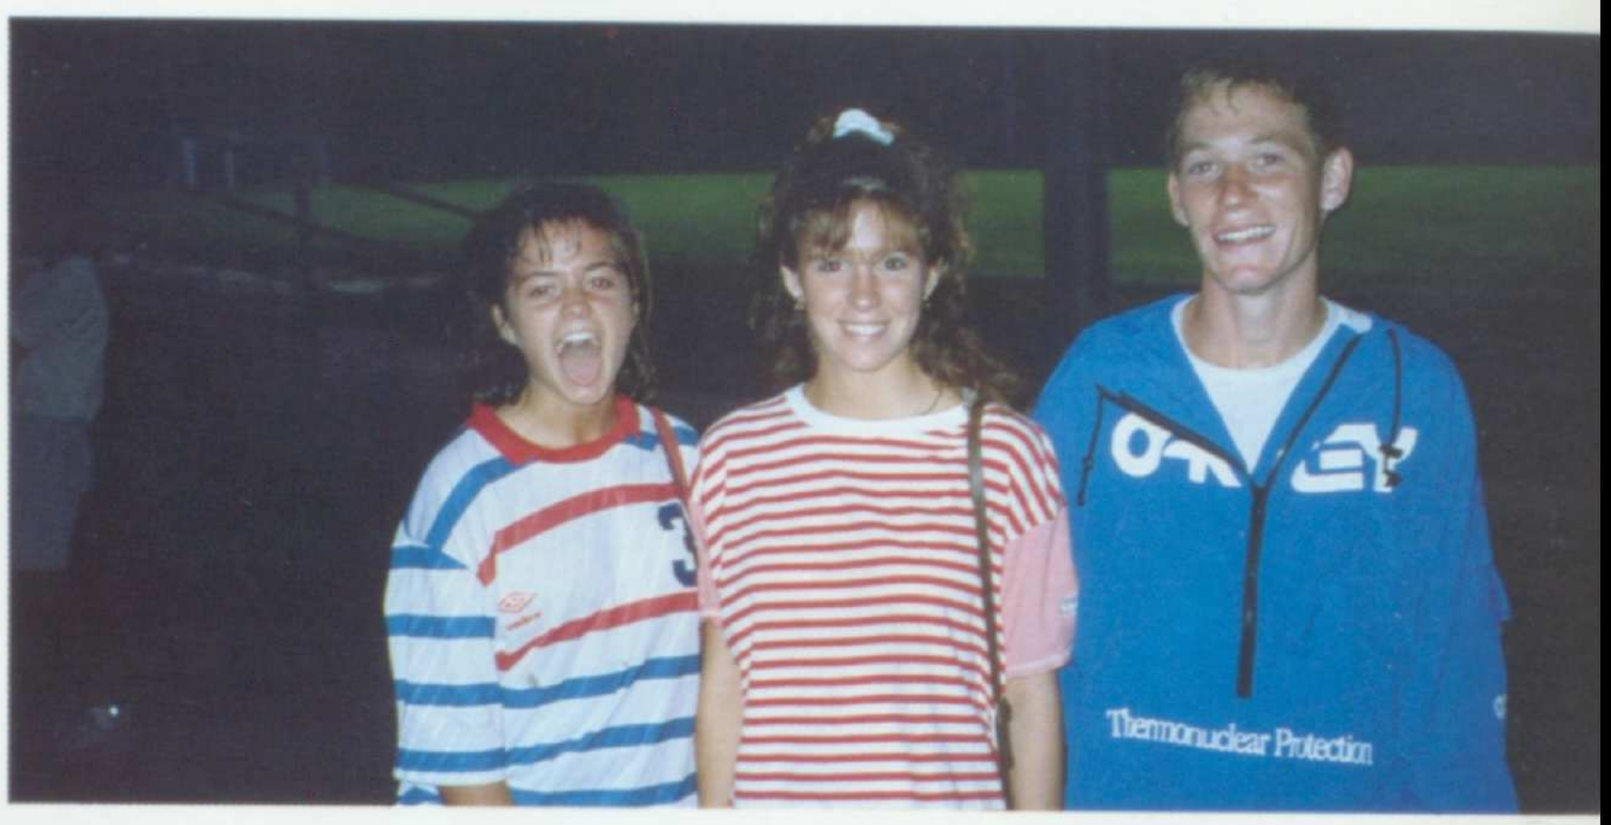
Told to remain silent and pretend as if nothing is wrong or be prepared to forfeit their lives, Kerry Barger and Nathan Fairchild ignore this alien creature, Eileen Johnston, beside them.

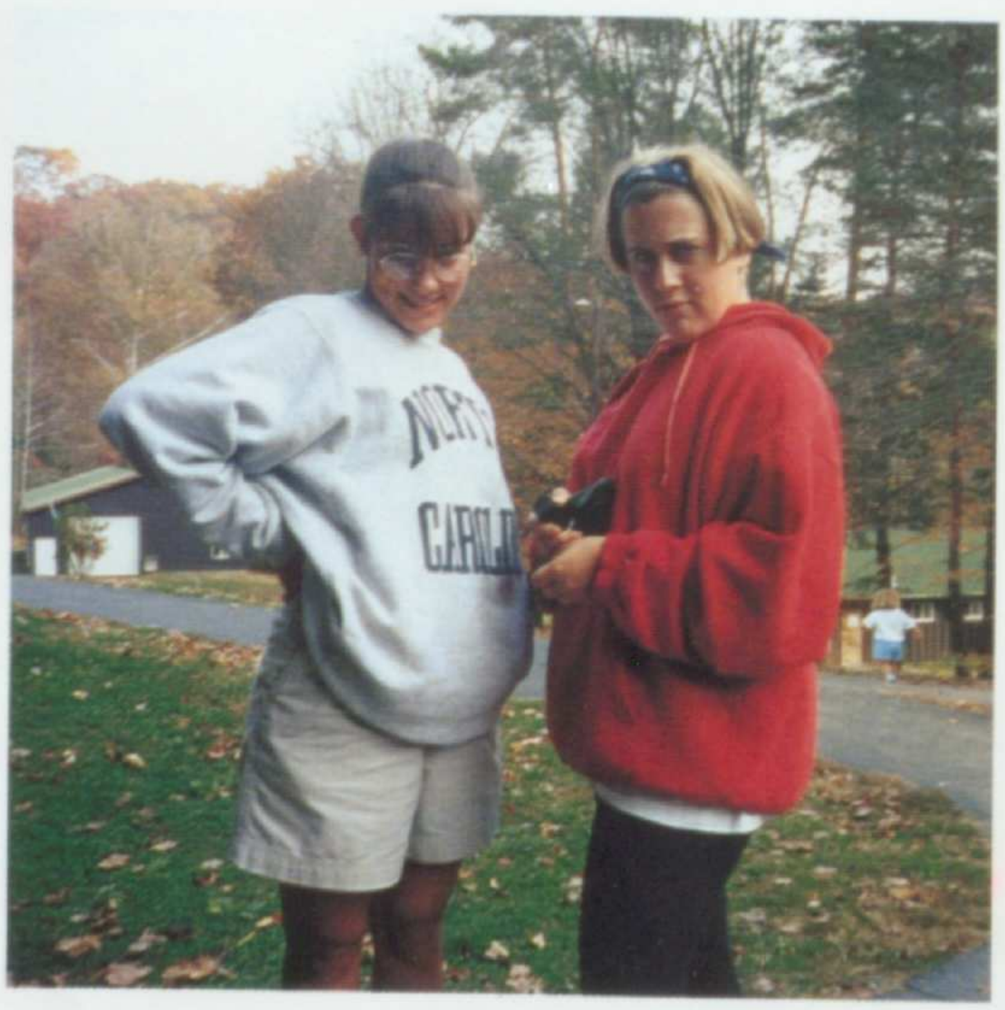
"It's 3:00 p.m. and I am out of here!" says hip David Macer.



While a naive Brian Eisenman is distracted by the camera, sly Shin O'Hara seizes the opportunity to swipe 25 cents.

As Molly Schneider does her impression of the Church Lady, Trish DeWitt asks, "What choo talkin' bout, Mr. Drummond?"

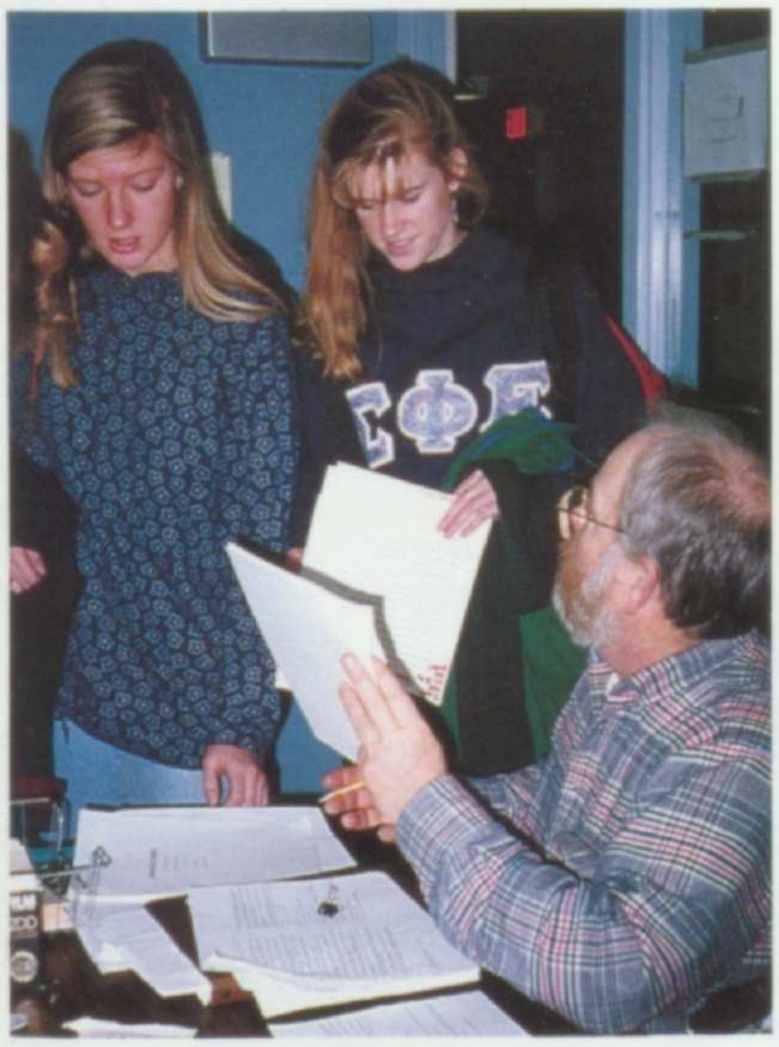
Sporting a simple but classy frock, senior Marilyn Monroe eagerly awaits the arrival of her Homecoming date, Chris "Pierre" Yep.



Having been caught pigging out on pizza, Amy Perry, Alison McCarthy, Pam Zeigler, Emily Geizer, Beth Mauger, and Nivita Bahalla pause to smile sheepishly for the camera.

When told he needed a lisence to have that much fun, Eric Gee produced one on the spot and said," What do you call that, pal?"

Overworked and underappreciated, Dan Gerber is obviously stressed out over the looming task of producing the yearbook.



When the stress of being a senior gets to be too much for her, Robin Ogle takes comfort in using her mom as a sounding board.

Sure these three girls, Jen Rachfal, Emily Mily, and Cami Mcbride are members of two different senior shirt groups, but hey, they can handle it.

What a surprise! Mr. Savon is surrounded by students of the opposite sex.

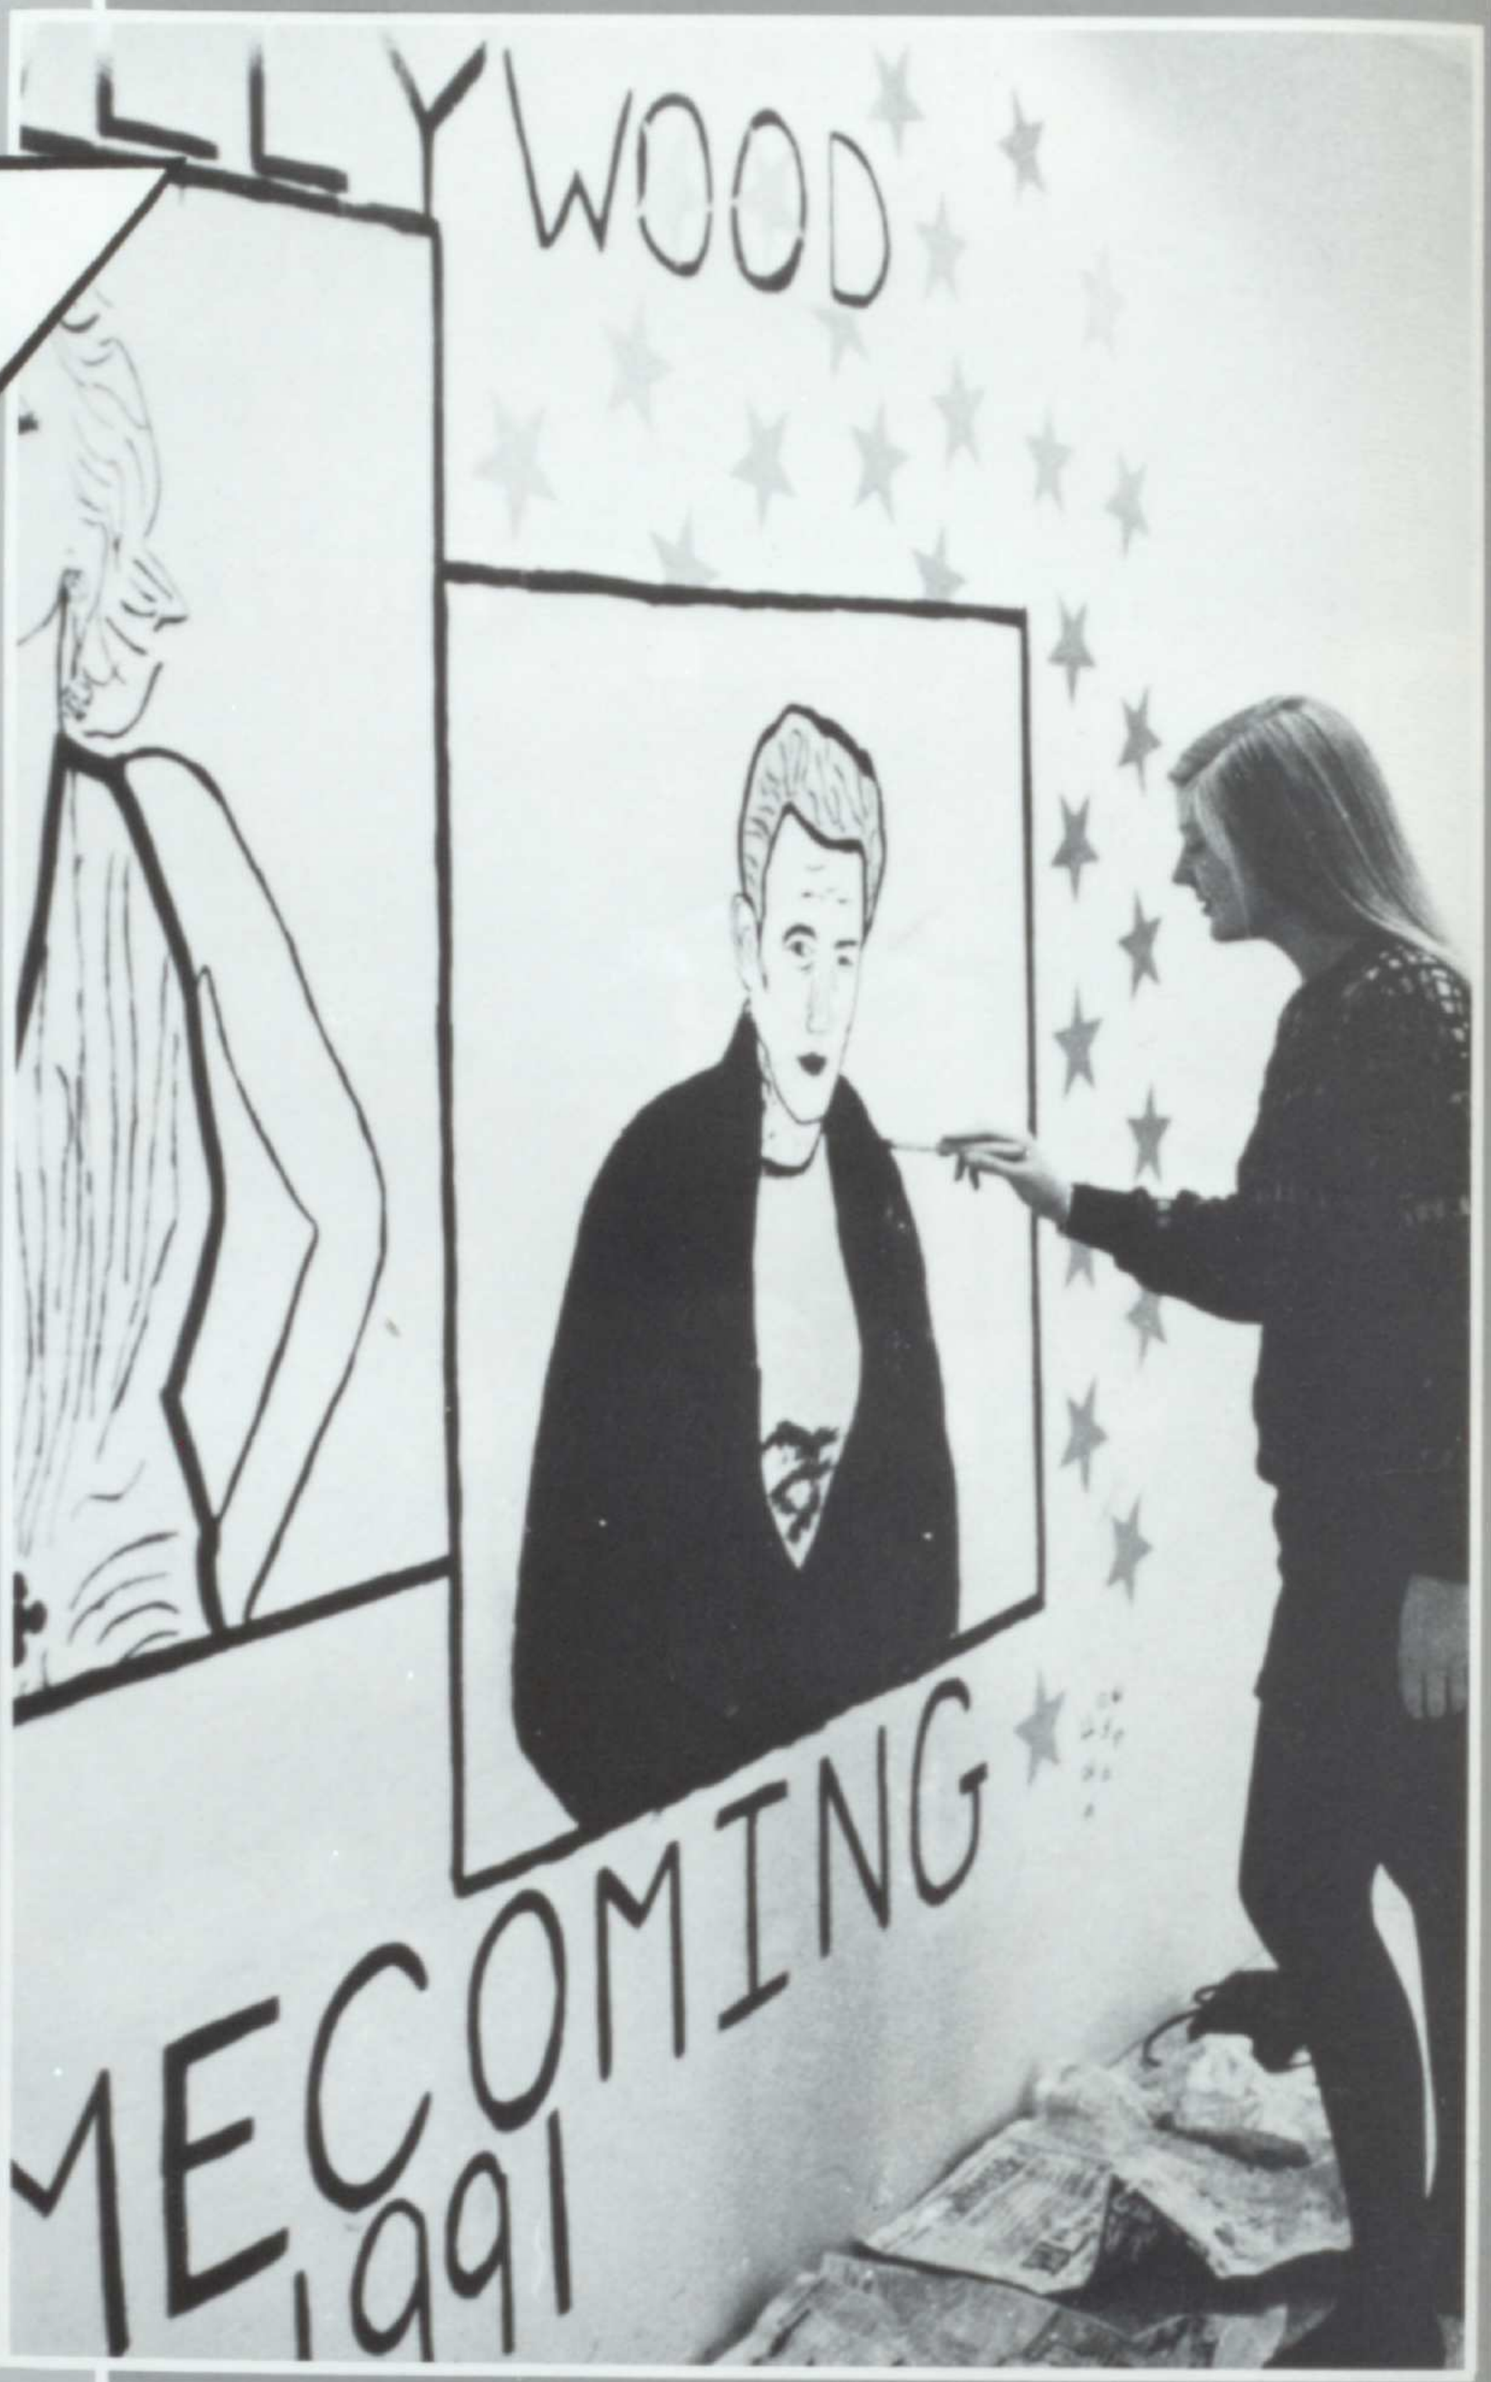
Events

Focal Point

Aspiring to be as rebellious as James Dean, Barb Myers sneers while putting the final touches on her Hollywood Homecoming masterpiece. It was sheer poetry in motion watching Myers, affectionately referred to as "Monet" by close friends such as you and I, put the paintbrush to the plaster.



Spirit Week

To begin the Spirit Week festivities, a pep rally was held in the new gym. Homecoming Court nominees were announced by Student Council President Marc Amos. Also, all fall sports were asked to stand and be recognized by the student body.

Each day of Spirit Week was assigned a special dress code. Monday was the day for students to wear their favorite university logo. On Tuesday, students and teachers had the option to dress as hippies. Then, Wednesday was the designated dress up day. Finally, Thursday was red and blue day, to enhance school spirit. Overall, the idea of having special dress days during Spirit Week enlightened the normally dull and boring school days.

Class competitions and the closing pep rally were held on Thursday, October 17th before the bonfire. The four class competitions were the "Singin' In the Rain" top hat/cane race, "War of the Worlds" tug of war, "You've Got the Right One, Baby" sing off, and the "Ben Hur" chariot race. Both the senior and sophomore classes tied for the top spot of Spirit Week.

Spirit Week ended with the announcement of the Homecoming Court and the bonfire that followed. Students throughout the school agreed that Spirit Week was a success.

These five freshmen display their manly forms at the Spirit Week bonfire.

Getting psyched up at one of the pep rallies, the Cardinal tries to get the students to cheer.

Homecoming

A STAR STUDDED NIGHT

A welcomed tradition from years past has been the Homecoming football game and dance, and this year the feeling was no different at TWHS. Student Council Hosted an eventful dance, whose theme was Hollywood Homecoming. Streamers and lights gaily decorated the auxiliary gym. On the side wall of the gym, a skyline glittered with lights. Gold and silver stars decorated the showcase with the names of couples that were present. Braden Blumensteil, who escorted Homecoming queen Eileen Johnston, said, "It was an enchanting evening filled with stars." This sentiment seemed to be widely felt by the couples dancing to oldies and recent songs. All and all, one might say Hollywood Homecoming was a night of champagne wishes and caviar dreams.

By Suzanne Wahlenmaier

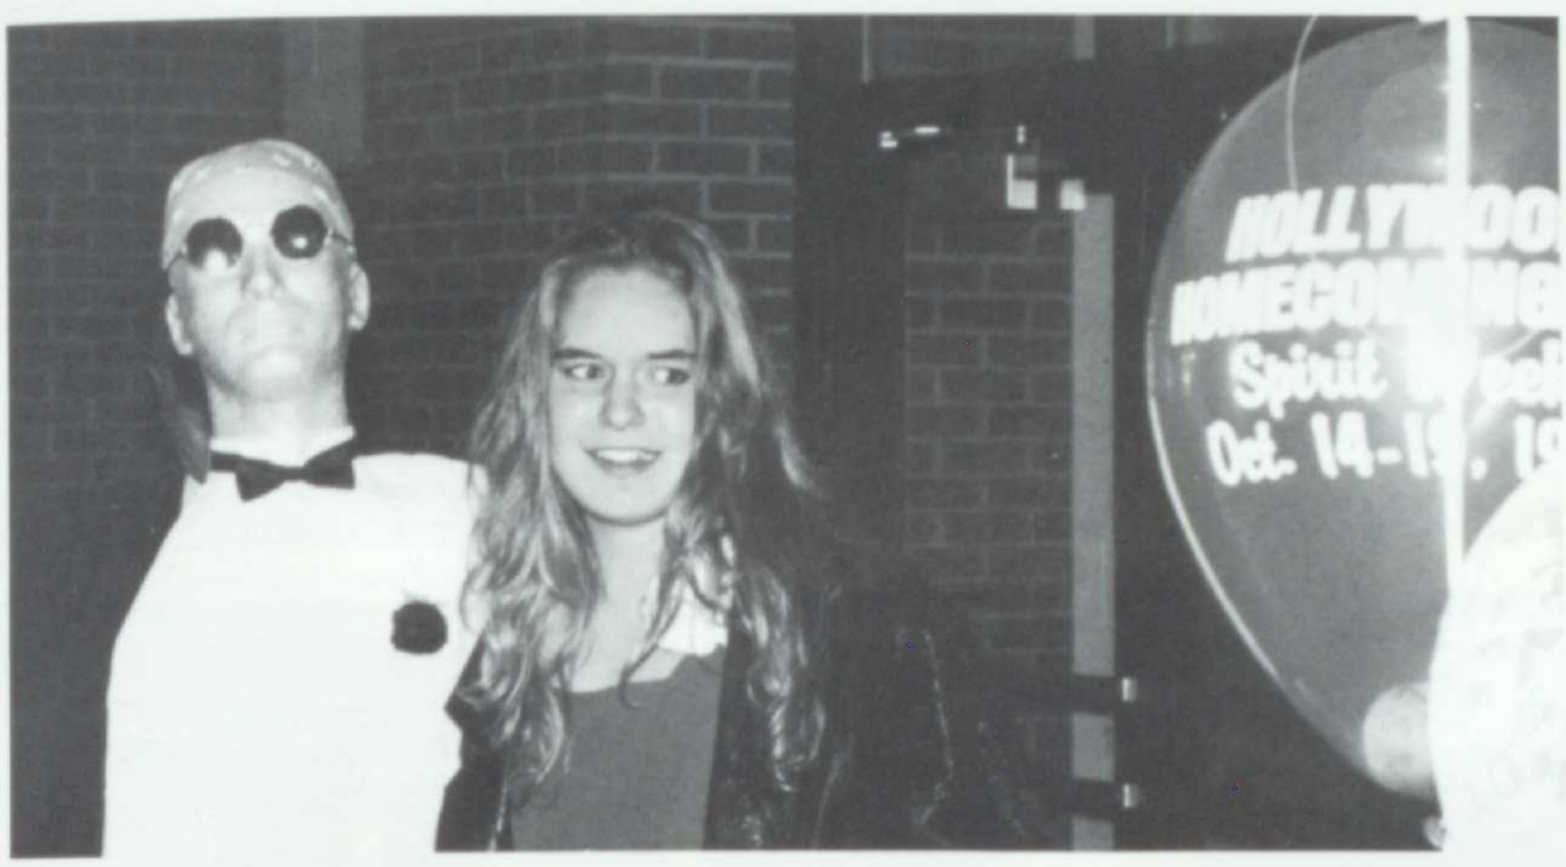
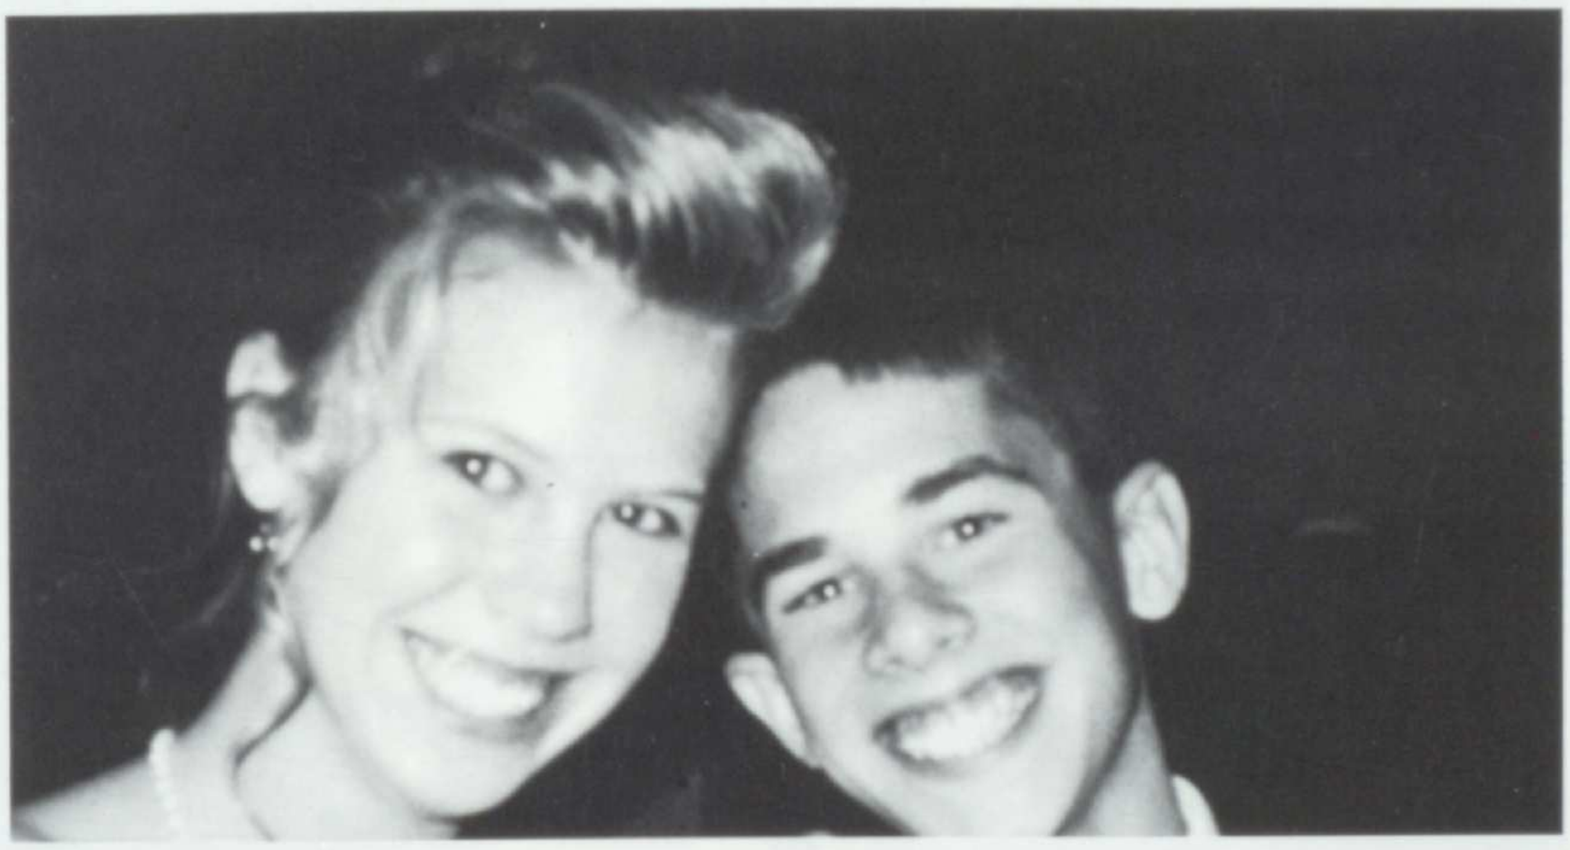
Homecoming Queen Eileen Johnston and date Braden Blumensteil pose for pictures in front of this year's indescribable background.

Someone trying to cut in on seniors Kevin McTigue and John Lyon dancing together, gets a piece of Kevin's mind.

"Oh Todd, you're such a card," laughs junior Marina Opitz to her date.

"What do mean my date looks a little stiff and uptight ?"





Senior Jenny Coffman executes the perfect form of "The Bird" to innocent bystanders.

Holly Hop

Often viewed as the best dance of the year, this year's Holly Hop was no exception. On the night of December 14th the gym was filled with holiday spirit. Students arrived dressed in festive attire ranging from boxer shorts to blinking lights. Everyone agreed that Music Sensation did a great job of providing "danceable" music. Sprigs of mistletoe and the spirit of the Holidays continue to make the Holly Hop the high point of every student's winter.

Valentine's

THE LOVE CONNECTION

When one thinks of Valentine's Day many things come to mind. Flowers, candy, hearts, and kisses are usually at the top of everyone's list. For TWHS students this is not true. The Valentine's Dance is top priority for every Cardinal at this time.

This year, heart shaped balloons cascaded down from the auxillary gym ceiling. Gold lame' decorated the once drab gym walls, and couples danced the night away with music of today and yesterday. Students from both TWHS and WKHS attended this long awaited evening. Junior Tom Groeneveld said, "The Valentine's Dance is special, because the patrons are always enveloped by the romantic atmosphere." (Whoa, that's deep!) In conclusion, I guess you can call the Valentine's Dance TWHS' own Love Connection.

Being the only Junior of the group, Tom Groeneveld becomes a little camera shy, and hides behind his date.

Do you think Eileen Johnston, Chris Malik, Nathan Fairchild, and Kerry Barger posed for this picture? No, probably not.

"Just call me Rico Suave!"

STARLIGHT ENCHANTMENT

VALENTINE'S DANCE

Time: 8:00 p.m.- 11:00 p.m.

Place: Thomas Worthington Auxillary Gym

Date: Feburary 8, 1992

As rest of the crew smiles for the camera Senior Alison McCarthy does her " Hans and Franz " impression.

Brian Emmerling, Amanda Lowe, and Lija Kalinins don't seem to mind Jay McNeil's growth on his legs.

Prom '92

Midnight Enchantment

For the first and last time Thomas Worthington and Worthington Kilbourne high schools celebrated together at the 1992 Prom. The theme of Midnight Enchantment was present in the many beautiful decorations. Fantasy flowers and a magical fountain adorned the Masonic Temple transforming it into a place of wonder. Second Nature played a medley of tunes ranging from "Brown-Eyed Girl" to "Every Breath You Take." Tim Senff and Amanda Stark received the honors of being Thomas Worthington Prom King and Queen.

Afterhours was held at Sawmill Athletic Club from midnight until four A.M. Students had the opportunity to play volleyball and racquetball, go swimming, partake in bingo, or eat and hang out with friends. Many door-prizes were won including a color TV, word processor, and boom box with a CD player. Non-prom goers were able to participate in Afterhours. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed themselves and agreed that Prom '92 was a big success.

By Heather White and Katie Cunin

Missy Anderson, Antonio Benton, and Kerry Barger are all looking lovely at the Prom. Nathan Fairchild, what did you eat for dinner?

Excited to be at Prom '92 are Penny Williams and Andy Stull, two chitlins having a great time.

One of the invitations sent to all Seniors proudly displays the theme chosen for this year's prom: Midnight Enchantment.

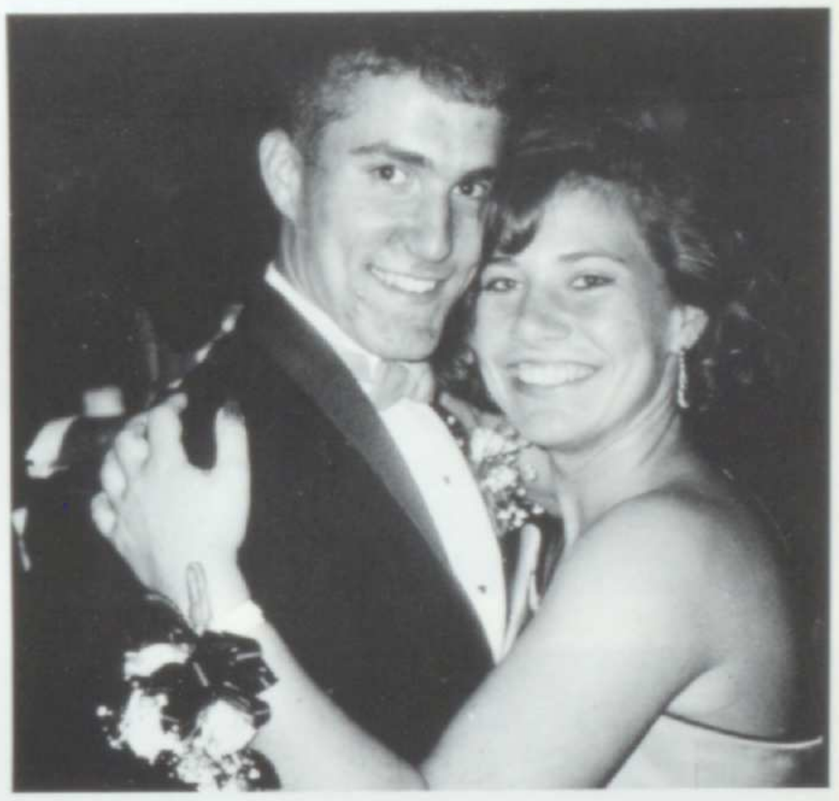
Pretending that he is Santa Claus, Andy Beuter asks Pam Ziegler as she sits on his lap, "What would you like for Christmas, little girl?"

Dancing the night away, and obviously having a good time, Kathy Russ and Jim Matteis take time out to smile for the camera.

Overcoming the difficulties of the school split are Troy Miller and Heather Grimes, who gladly take a minute to pose for pictures galore.

Becky Sayre sways with her date, Eric Dawson, who looks like he is about to let loose and break into a wild chorus of 'Feelings'!

"Hi! We're Amy Porta and Eric Gleckler. We're happy, healthy, and just plain full of vitality. Are we the model for the most perfect couple, or what?"



Queen Amanda Stark and King Tim Senff radiate their new nobility. The "Freeballers" pose together one last time in all their prom splendor.

AFTERHOURS

"Tres Shepard, are you really going to eat the whole thing?!"

Rob Carpenter and Kristen McCollister just make the rest of us want to vomit.

Their duffle bags in hand, Scott Arent and Allison Hilliard are raring to go.

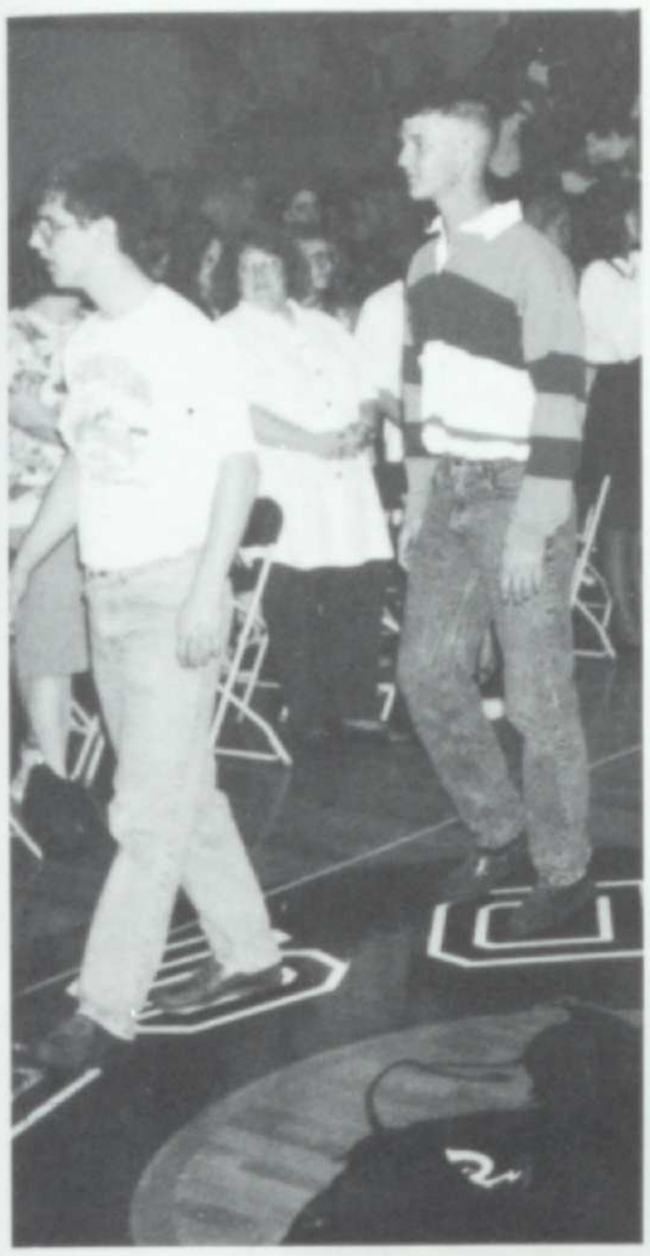
Bridgette Grills, Jen Savage, and Matt Minister are sporting the latest in head gear: T-shirts that resemble large underpants.

Two "real" men, Rob Kincaid and Mike McKee, dazzle Afterhours goers with their masculinity.

Give the camera a big ol', "Hey Howdy!" Todd Bracken and Karyn Lilly.

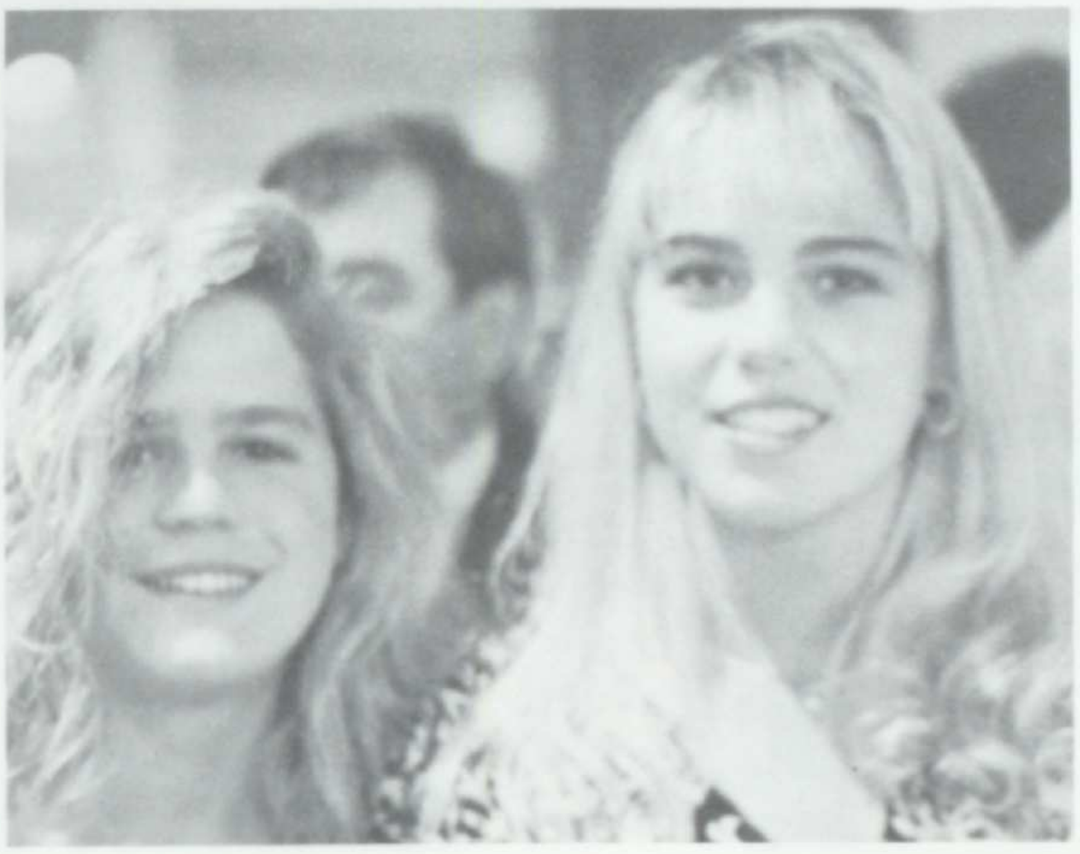
SENIOR CEREMONIES

Celebration of Excellence and Baccalaureate



Seniors were recognized for achievement in athletics and/or academics at the fourth annual Celebration of Excellence. The student body, faculty members and parents attended to watch the seniors as they were honored for achievements made during their senior year. One of the highlights was the announcement of the new Hall of Fame inductees, Eric Dawson and history teacher Mark Ellwood. The Celebration of Excellence ceremony was a nice prelude to commencement.

By Alison Lowe



Brian Eisenman and Pat Ellis "cue up" for front row seats in the TWHS gymnasium bleachers so they can watch Celebration of Excellence with an unobstructed view.

Even though Cindy Morris turned her back on Courtney Moser, Courtney can still keep that cute smile on her face.

Those attending Baccalaureate were fortunate enough to hear Abra Bush sing a beautiful solo.

"Glamour Gals" Gretchen Huestis and Stephanie Olson pose after making an appearance at Baccalaureate.

Baccalaureate was held at the United Methodist Church on Sunday, June 1. Baccalaureate is a time for students, parents and teachers to reflect on the seriousness of graduation. Greg Fisher addressed the audience with a message directed towards the students. He urged his classmates to appreciate their parents for all the love and support they had given. Music was another special part of Baccalaureate. The choir performed, Abra Bush and Jennifer Dalton sang solos and Jennifer Pollock performed a piano solo. Jim Imboden was the minister who presided over the thoughtful service.

By Alison Lowe

Choir director Jerry Parsons led the senior choir members in singing a touching melody to the teary-eyed audience at Baccalaureate.

GRADUATION

This year's commencement marked a special time in the history of Worthington High School. For the first time on June 6, 1992, seniors graduated from Thomas Worthington High School rather than WHS.

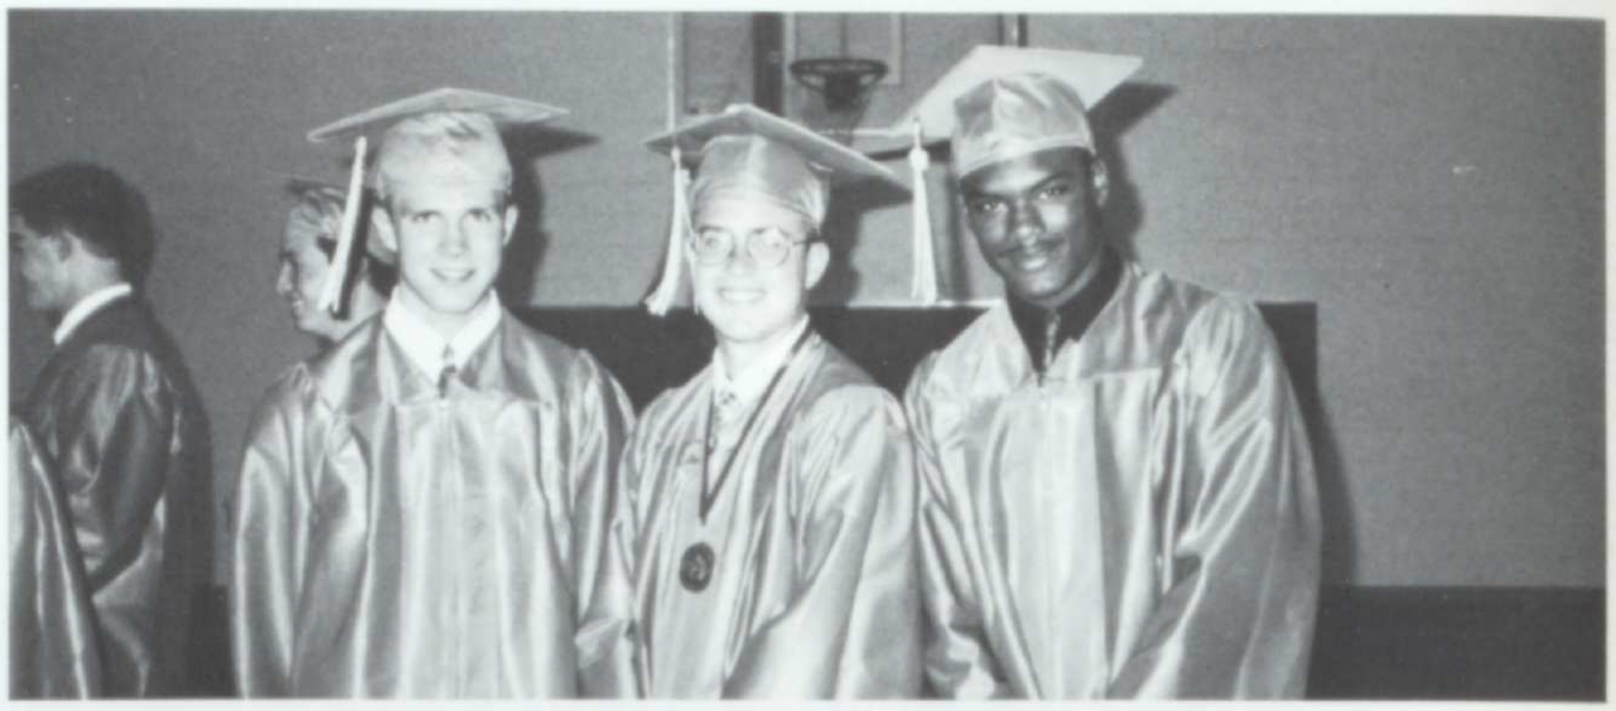
Graduation, instead of being at Mershon as it had been in previous years, was held inside the newly constructed gymnasium. The administration felt that holding the graduation ceremonies at TWHS was more personable and economic.

The students with all "A's" put on a humorous skit this year, poking fun at Ian Hamilton, Mrs. Bookwalter, and, of course, Mr. Northrup. Participating in the skit were: Amanda Stark, Pam Beim, Tim Senff, Josh Mendell, Mari Cameron, Susan Castner, Marly Hittepole, Jason Gutt, Brian Kahn, Jefferson Liao, and Jennifer Pollock.

Bill Michael and Marc Amos stated in a moving speech that the class of '92 had the weight of America's greatness on their shoulders. The students are the ones that will be responsible for rekindling the fire of America's patriotism.

The class of 1992 has accomplished many great things this school year. Their leadership and fun loving attitude will be greatly missed and fondly remembered by all in the years to come.

Shining with thoughts of the future and fond memories of the past are Matt Milnor, Aaron Turano, and Qwann Wood.



Senior choir members sing the Alma Mater.

Addressing the audience at the beginning of the ceremony is Jen Pollock.

Pictures of past champions watch over Jen Bender, Liz Orebaugh, and Cindy Morris who pose happily .

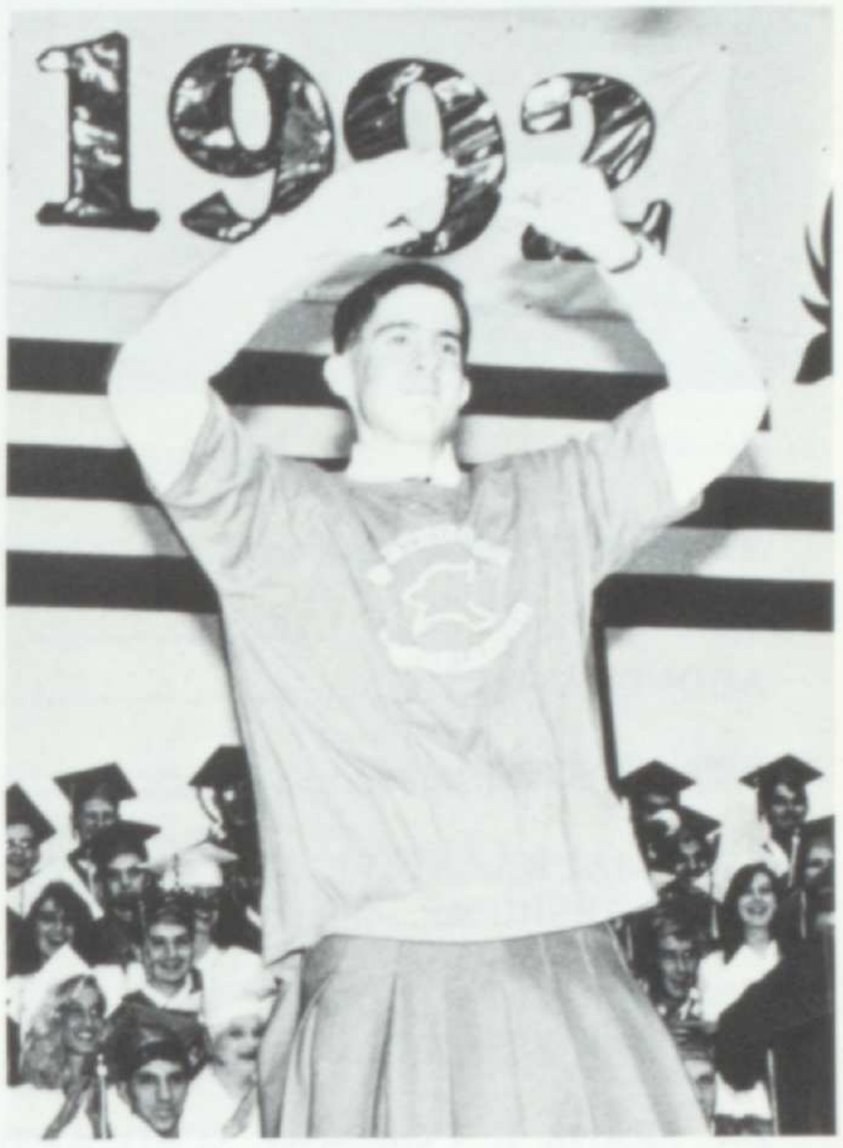
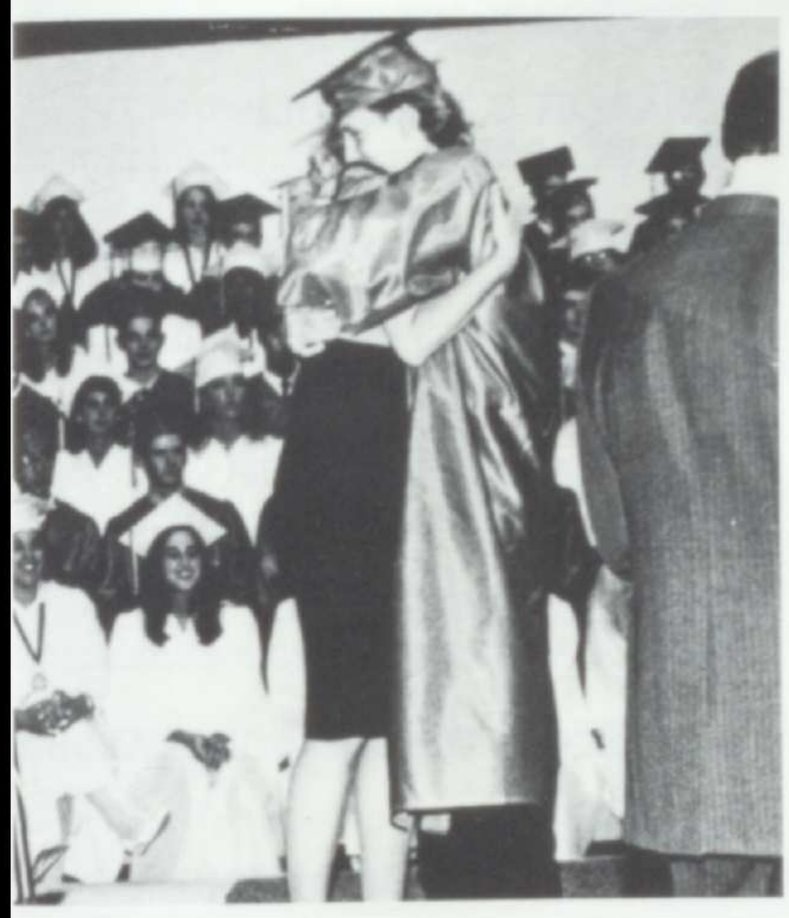
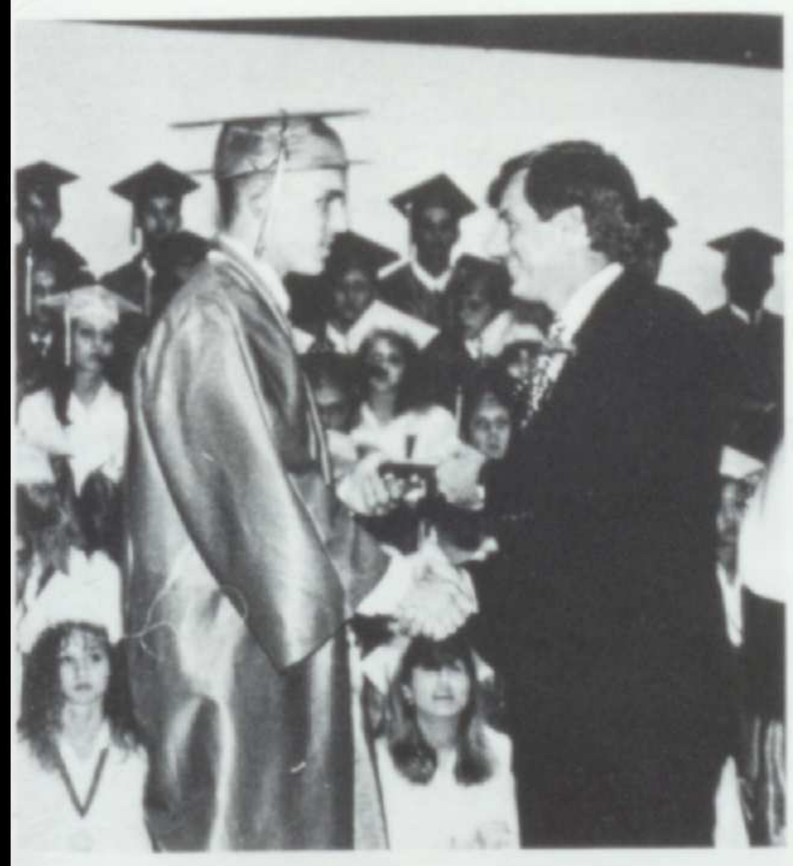
Performing in the skit, Jason Gutt has missed his calling as a Thomas Worthington cheerleader. Needless to say the audience was amused.







Diploma received, Eric Pickering rejoices.

Another milestone for Marc Amos.

Members of the senior skit have achieved a 4.0 grade point throughout their high school career.

CONGRATULATIONS

A VOICE OF MY OWN

Theatre Repertory began their season with A VOICE OF MY OWN by Elinor Jones.

A combination of singing and acting was used to present the struggle women had faced in the literary world. Beginning with Sappho (Kaya Buckham), a Greek poet, and moving into the ninetennth century with Harriet Beacher Stowe (Kara Bishop) the play presented various distinguished authors. The production showed how difficult it had been for women to have their work published. It was a testament to how far society has come in the last hundred years.

A VOICE OF MY OWN was entertaining and educational. It proved to be a great begining for the 1991-1992 theatre season.

By Alison Lowe

Senior Abra Bush checks Marly Hittepole's hat before the show.

The cast and guitarist April Baer assemble for curtain call.

An emotional speech by George Elliot is pondered by the other authoresses.

Smiling prettily for the camera are Mary Shelly, Fanny Burney, and Sappho.

AMADEUS

AMADEUS was performed by the theatre students in November. The production corresponded with the two hundreth anniversary of Mozart's death. Peter Shaffer's play is based on circumstantial evidence surrounding Mozart's death.

Adam Donmoyer played Antonio Salieri, court composer for Joseph II of Austria. The action revolves around Salieri's jealousy of Mozart's incredible talent. Salieri commits his life to sabotaging Mozart's career.

The climax of the play comes when Salieri goes to Mozart's home disguised as Mozart's father. Salieri reveals that he is the one behind Mozart's difficulties. Mozart, already close to the edge, is unable to handle the news and collapses.

Beautiful sets and costumes along with the powerful acting made the play a tremendous success for the thespians.

By Alison Lowe

Breaking out of character, Eric Dawson begins singing "You Are So Beautiful To Me" to Adam Donmoyer.

When Mozart breaks into his infamous giggle, Baron VanSwieten, Count Orsini-Rosenberg, Joseph II, Johann Kilian Von Strack, and Salieri wonder if he is sane.

Gee, Dan Gutin looks right puny next to Laura Wielonski and Michael Hamilton.

THE FOREIGNER

The TWHS Theatre Repertory presented an outstanding comedy, THE FOREIGNER, this winter. The cast brought the jokes to light in this play written by Larry Shue. Charlie, portrayed by Dan Gutin, was a shy and quiet man who needed a vacation. The one catch was that he did not like conversations; in fact, he didn't like to speak to strangers at all. His friend, Froggy, played by Ryan Lowery, informed everyone at the hotel that Charlie was a foreigner who spoke no English. Wild antics and hilarious adventures followed as Charlie learned to cope with his charade. In the end, Charlie had to decide whether to return to his normal life or stay in the new one he had found. From beginning to end, the cast entertained the audience until they were rolling in the aisles.

By Katie Cunin

Foreigner cast members share a final moment together.

Looking remarkably like Adam and Eve, David and Catherine contemplate the tempting apple.

BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS

Neil Simon's BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS came to life on the Annex stage in January. The play is the first of a series based on the playwright's life.

Set in the late nineteen thirties the play deals with Eugene Jerome's (Pat Tiller) coming of age. Through excerpts from his memoirs, we see the problems that his family faces and how, through it all, they learn the true meaning of family.

BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS proved to be the perfect mixture of humor and sincerity.

By Alison Lowe

Shocked is the word to describe Eugene's expression when Stanley gives him an "adult" postcard.

TWO AMERICAN PORTRAITS

TWO AMERICAN PORTRAITS, performed in February, was a look at two distinctively different authors, Emily Dickinson and Lorraine Hansbery.

THE BELLE OF AMHERST, by William Luce, is the story of Emily Dickinson's personal life and her writing career. The audience was "invited" into Miss Dickinson's parlor while she talked about her dreams and her writing. Luce showed Emily as a young woman who lived a reclusive life by choice and was amused at people's reactions to this. Robin Myers performed her role as Emily Dickinson at the State Thespian Conference. It was a great honor for Robin to be recognized for her superior work.

TO BE YOUNG, GIFTED AND BLACK, performed in honor of Black History Month, is the story of a contrasting writer, Lorraine Hansberry. Adapted from Hansberry's personal account of her life, the play showed her struggle to be a female writer amidst racial prejudice. The cast performed at the Ohio Theatre Alliance Regional Contest, and was awarded a "superior" rating and an invitation to the State Festival. Special honors went to Damon Lane, who received an Outstanding Acting Achievement Award, and Anika Penn who was given an All State Cast Member Award.

Congratulations to all the members of TWO AMERICAN PORTRAITS for their tremendous work and achievement.

BRIGADOON

Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe's romantic musical BRIGADOON was presented in March by the theatre and music departments.

Tommy Albright (Ben Sprunger) and Jeff Daniels (Adam Donmoyer), young men from New York, stumble upon the village Brigadoon while hunting in the Scottish Highlands. They soon discover that the village is under a spell that makes a day pass once every hundred years. Despite the odd situation, Tommy falls in love with Fiona MacLauren (Jennifer Dalton), and Jeff is pursued by village flirt, Meg Brockie (Marly Hittlepole) . At the end of the day, Tommy and Jeff leave and Brigadoon disappears. Four months later, back in New York, Tommy realizes that he can't live wihout Fiona. Tommy and Jeff return to Scotland and the power of true love makes it possible for Tommy to be with Fiona, in Brigadoon, forever.

Putting his hands up for protection, Jeff tries to ward off Meg's advances.

CHARLOTTE'S WEB

Every year children from the Worthington elementary schools are entertained by the high school thespians in the annual Children's Tour. This year the story CHARLOTTE'S WEB by E.B. White was used, in an adapted form, to entertain the children.

For those who are not familiar with the story, CHARLOTTE'S WEB is about a young girl named Fern (Katherine Bilodeau, Deborah Vaughan) who saves a little pig named Wilbur (Elizabeth Howe, Michael Hamilton) from being killed. Later when Wilbur moves to Fern's uncle's farm a spider named Charlotte (Meghan Maguire, Jennifer Dalton) befriends him. She, too, with the help of a rat, save Wilbur's life. Creative costuming and talented performances delighted the young students. CHARLOTTE'S WEB was another fine accomplishment for the thespians.

By Alison Lowe

Coming to the rescue for Wilbur is Fern and her friend while Avery readies his gun for action.

THE CURIOUS SAVAGE

Thomas Worthington's first Theatre Repertory season came to an end with the production of THE CURIOUS SAVAGE. True to its name, the play was a curious tale of an eccentric woman and one million dollars worth of missing bonds.

Meghan Maguire starred as Ethel P. Savage, the offbeat widow of a millionaire. After the death of her husband she hides the bonds from her step-children because she wants to use the money to help people's dreams come true. This action convinces Mrs. Savage's children to commit her to The Cloisters. While there she befriends the troubled patients at the hospital.

In an exciting closing act the children arrive at The Cloisters after various misadventures planned by Ethel .The true location of the bonds is revealed only to have them disappear again. In the final minutes of the show Miss Willie (Amy Harsh) returns the bonds to Mrs. Savage without anyone's knowledge.

By Alison Lowe

Samuel, Florence, Hannibal, Lily Belle, and Titus gather in the living-room of The Cloisters for a "friendly" chat.

Mrs. Paddy, Florence, Fairy May, Hannibal and Jeff peek through the door so they can spy on Mrs. Savage and her children.

Special thanks for all of the help to: Mr. and Mrs. Hopton, Courtney Moser, Lisa Wendt, Meghan McCarthy, Trish DeWitt, and Mr. and Mrs. Lowe.

SENIOR PARTY

This year's post-graduation party was held at the Continental Athletic Club. As with senior parties in the past, the club was decorated as a casino. Parents posed as dealers for games like blackjack and 21. The grads were able to win fake money with which they could buy prizes like backpacks and radios that would come in handy at college. After spending all of their money, grads could shoot pool or play walleyball. Music was provided by a DJ, and a fantastic slide show compiled by Danny Gerber was presented. The refreshments were plentiful. At the end of the evening everyone gathered together in a huge circle to say good-bye. Hugs and tears marked the end of an exciting day and a memorable four years.

Flaunting their winnings are pseudo millionaires Dave McSweeny and Todd Davis.

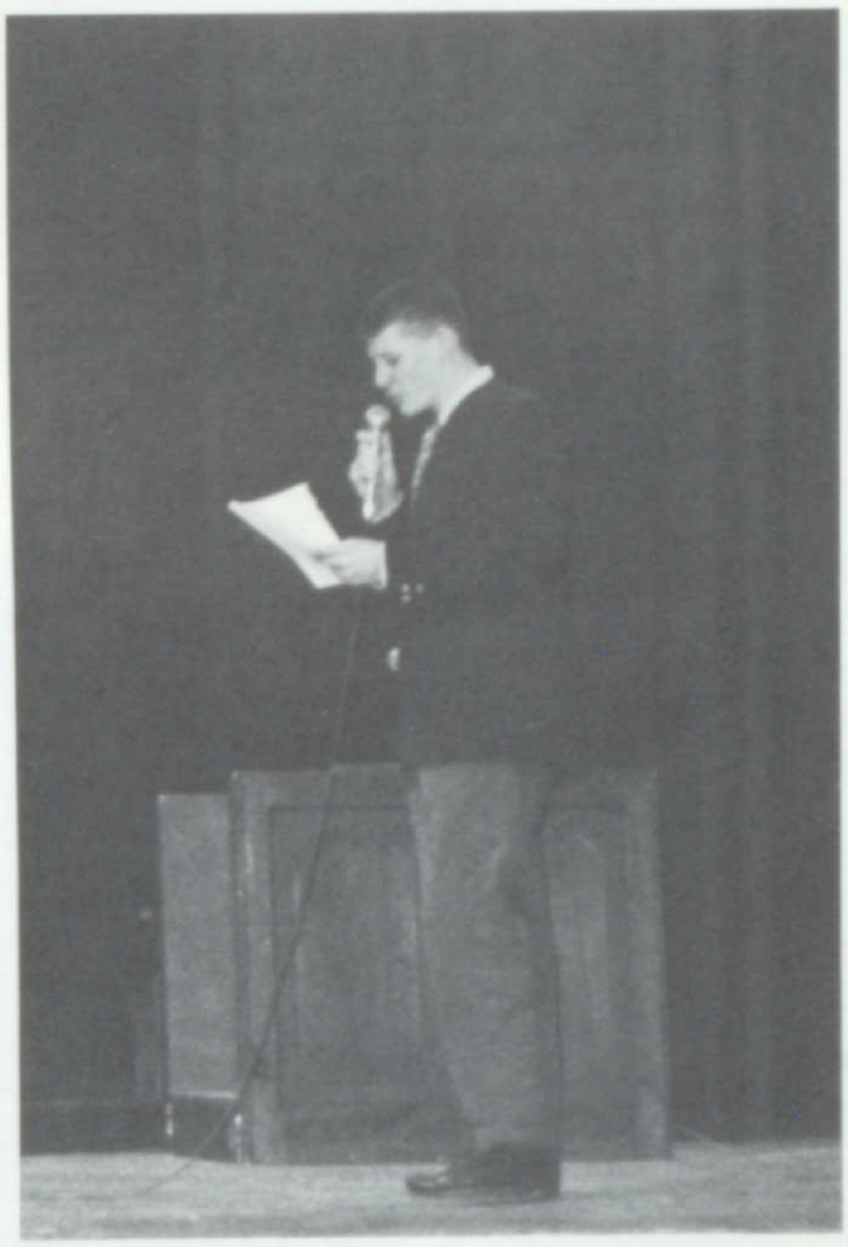
You're finally in the yearbook Andy Reis. Hope this makes your day!!!

Seniors end their four years with a group hug.

"Ha ha ha it's mine, all mine!" says Missy Anderson, member of Gamblers Anonymous, while Jon Olsen sniffs his fake money and dreams of future fortune.

TWHS TALENT

During Mock Trials, Senior Lisa Fudge has a look of astonishment as the opposition presents their case.



Instead of presenting his case at the Mock Trials, Senior Kevin McTigue tries to sing the song "I'm Too Sexy..." to the judge.

Students and parents fear for the future of education, as the true warped personalities of the educators surfaces in the TWHS '92 Talent Show.

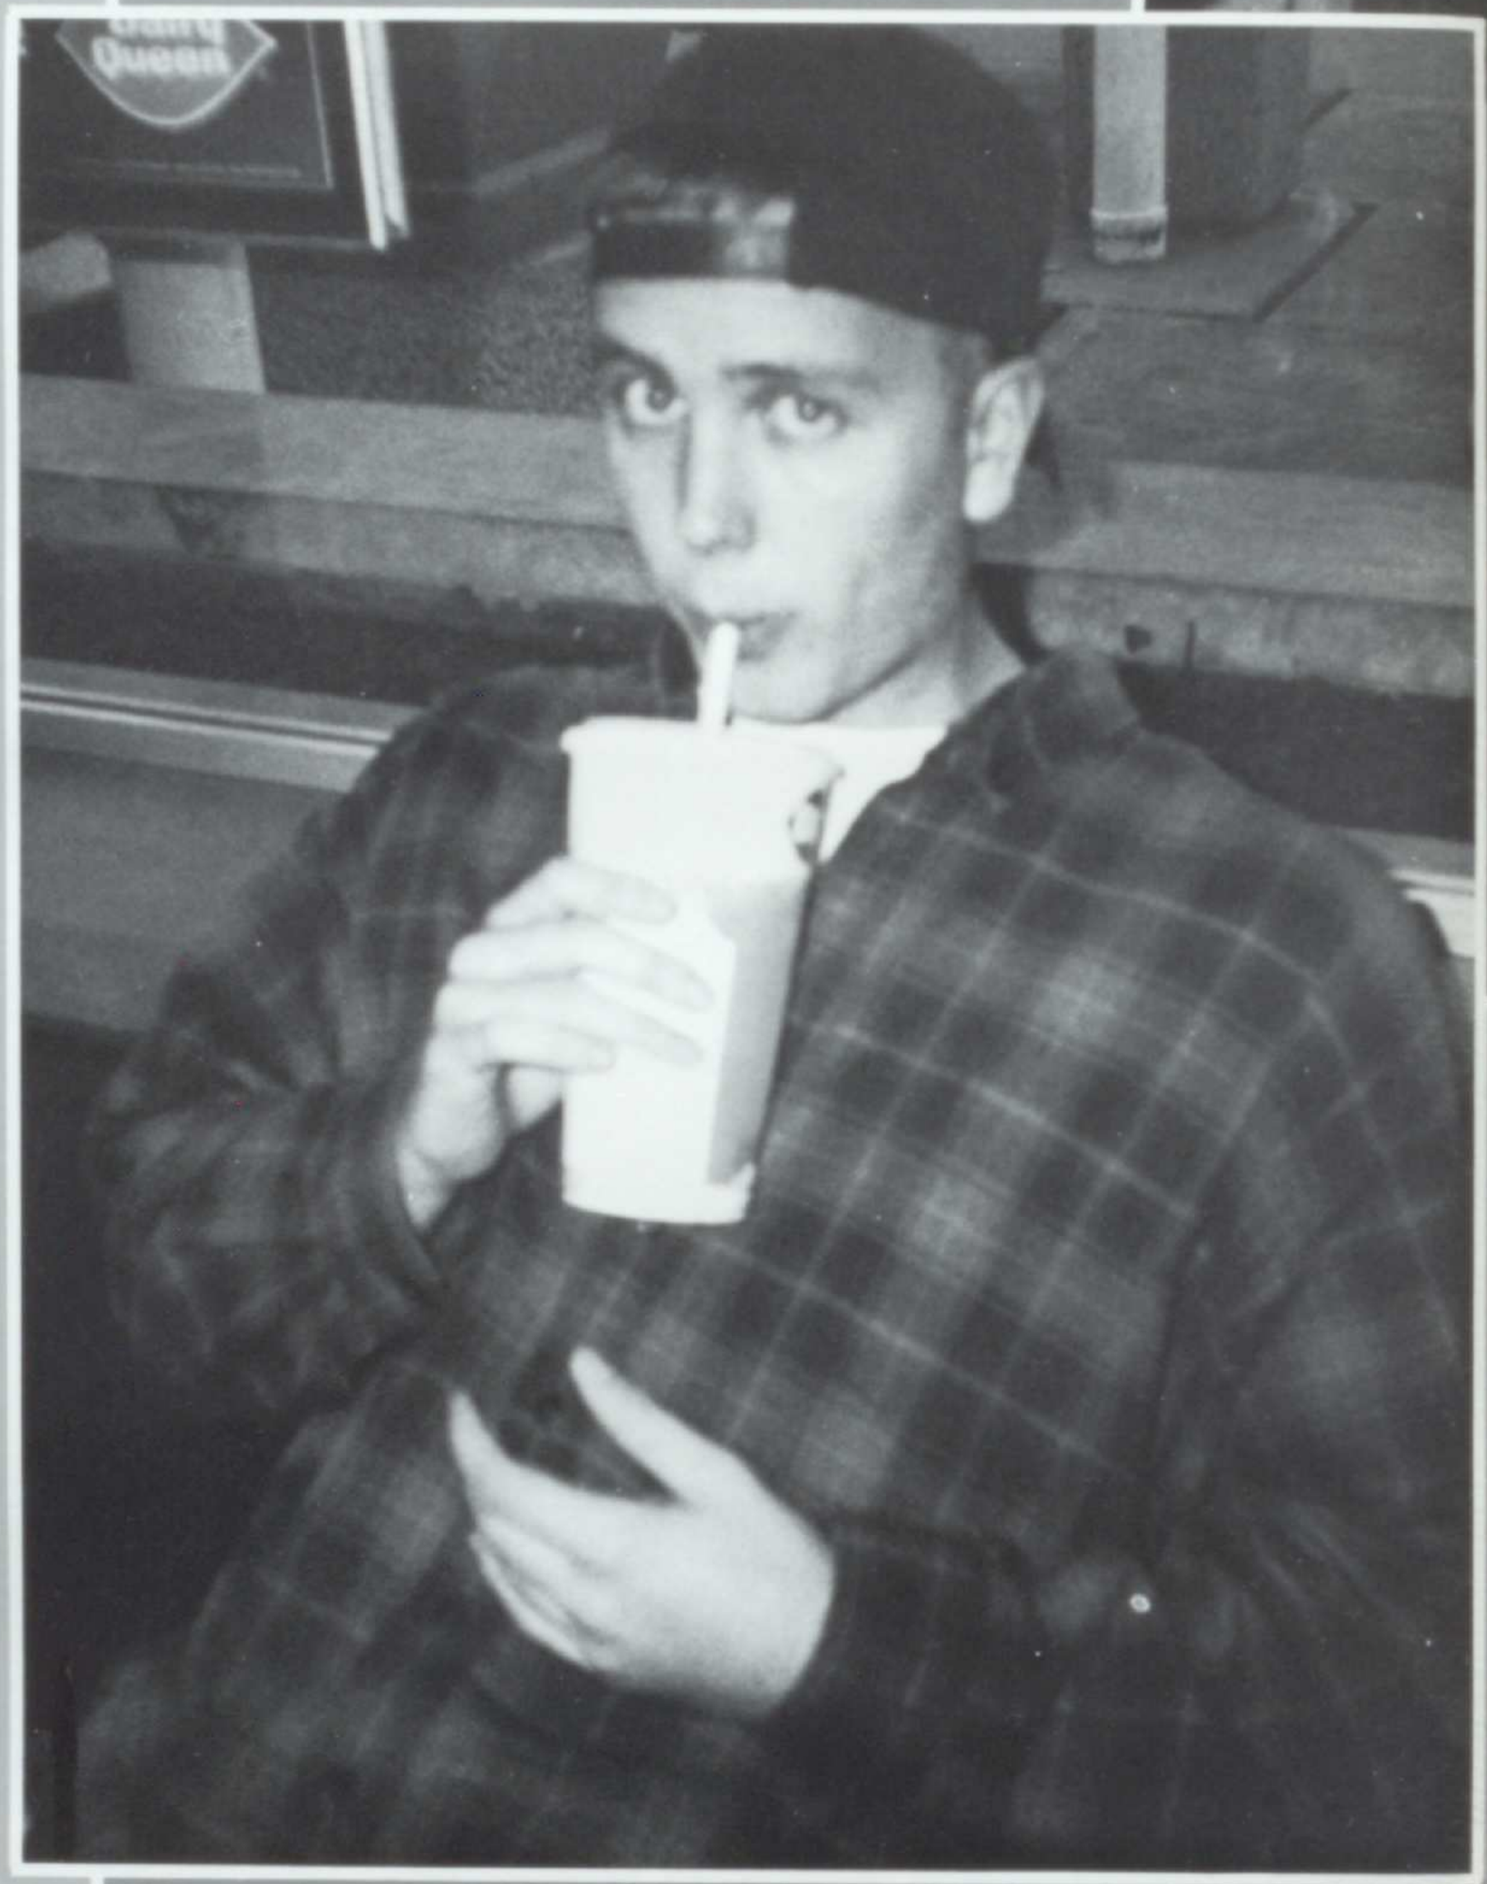
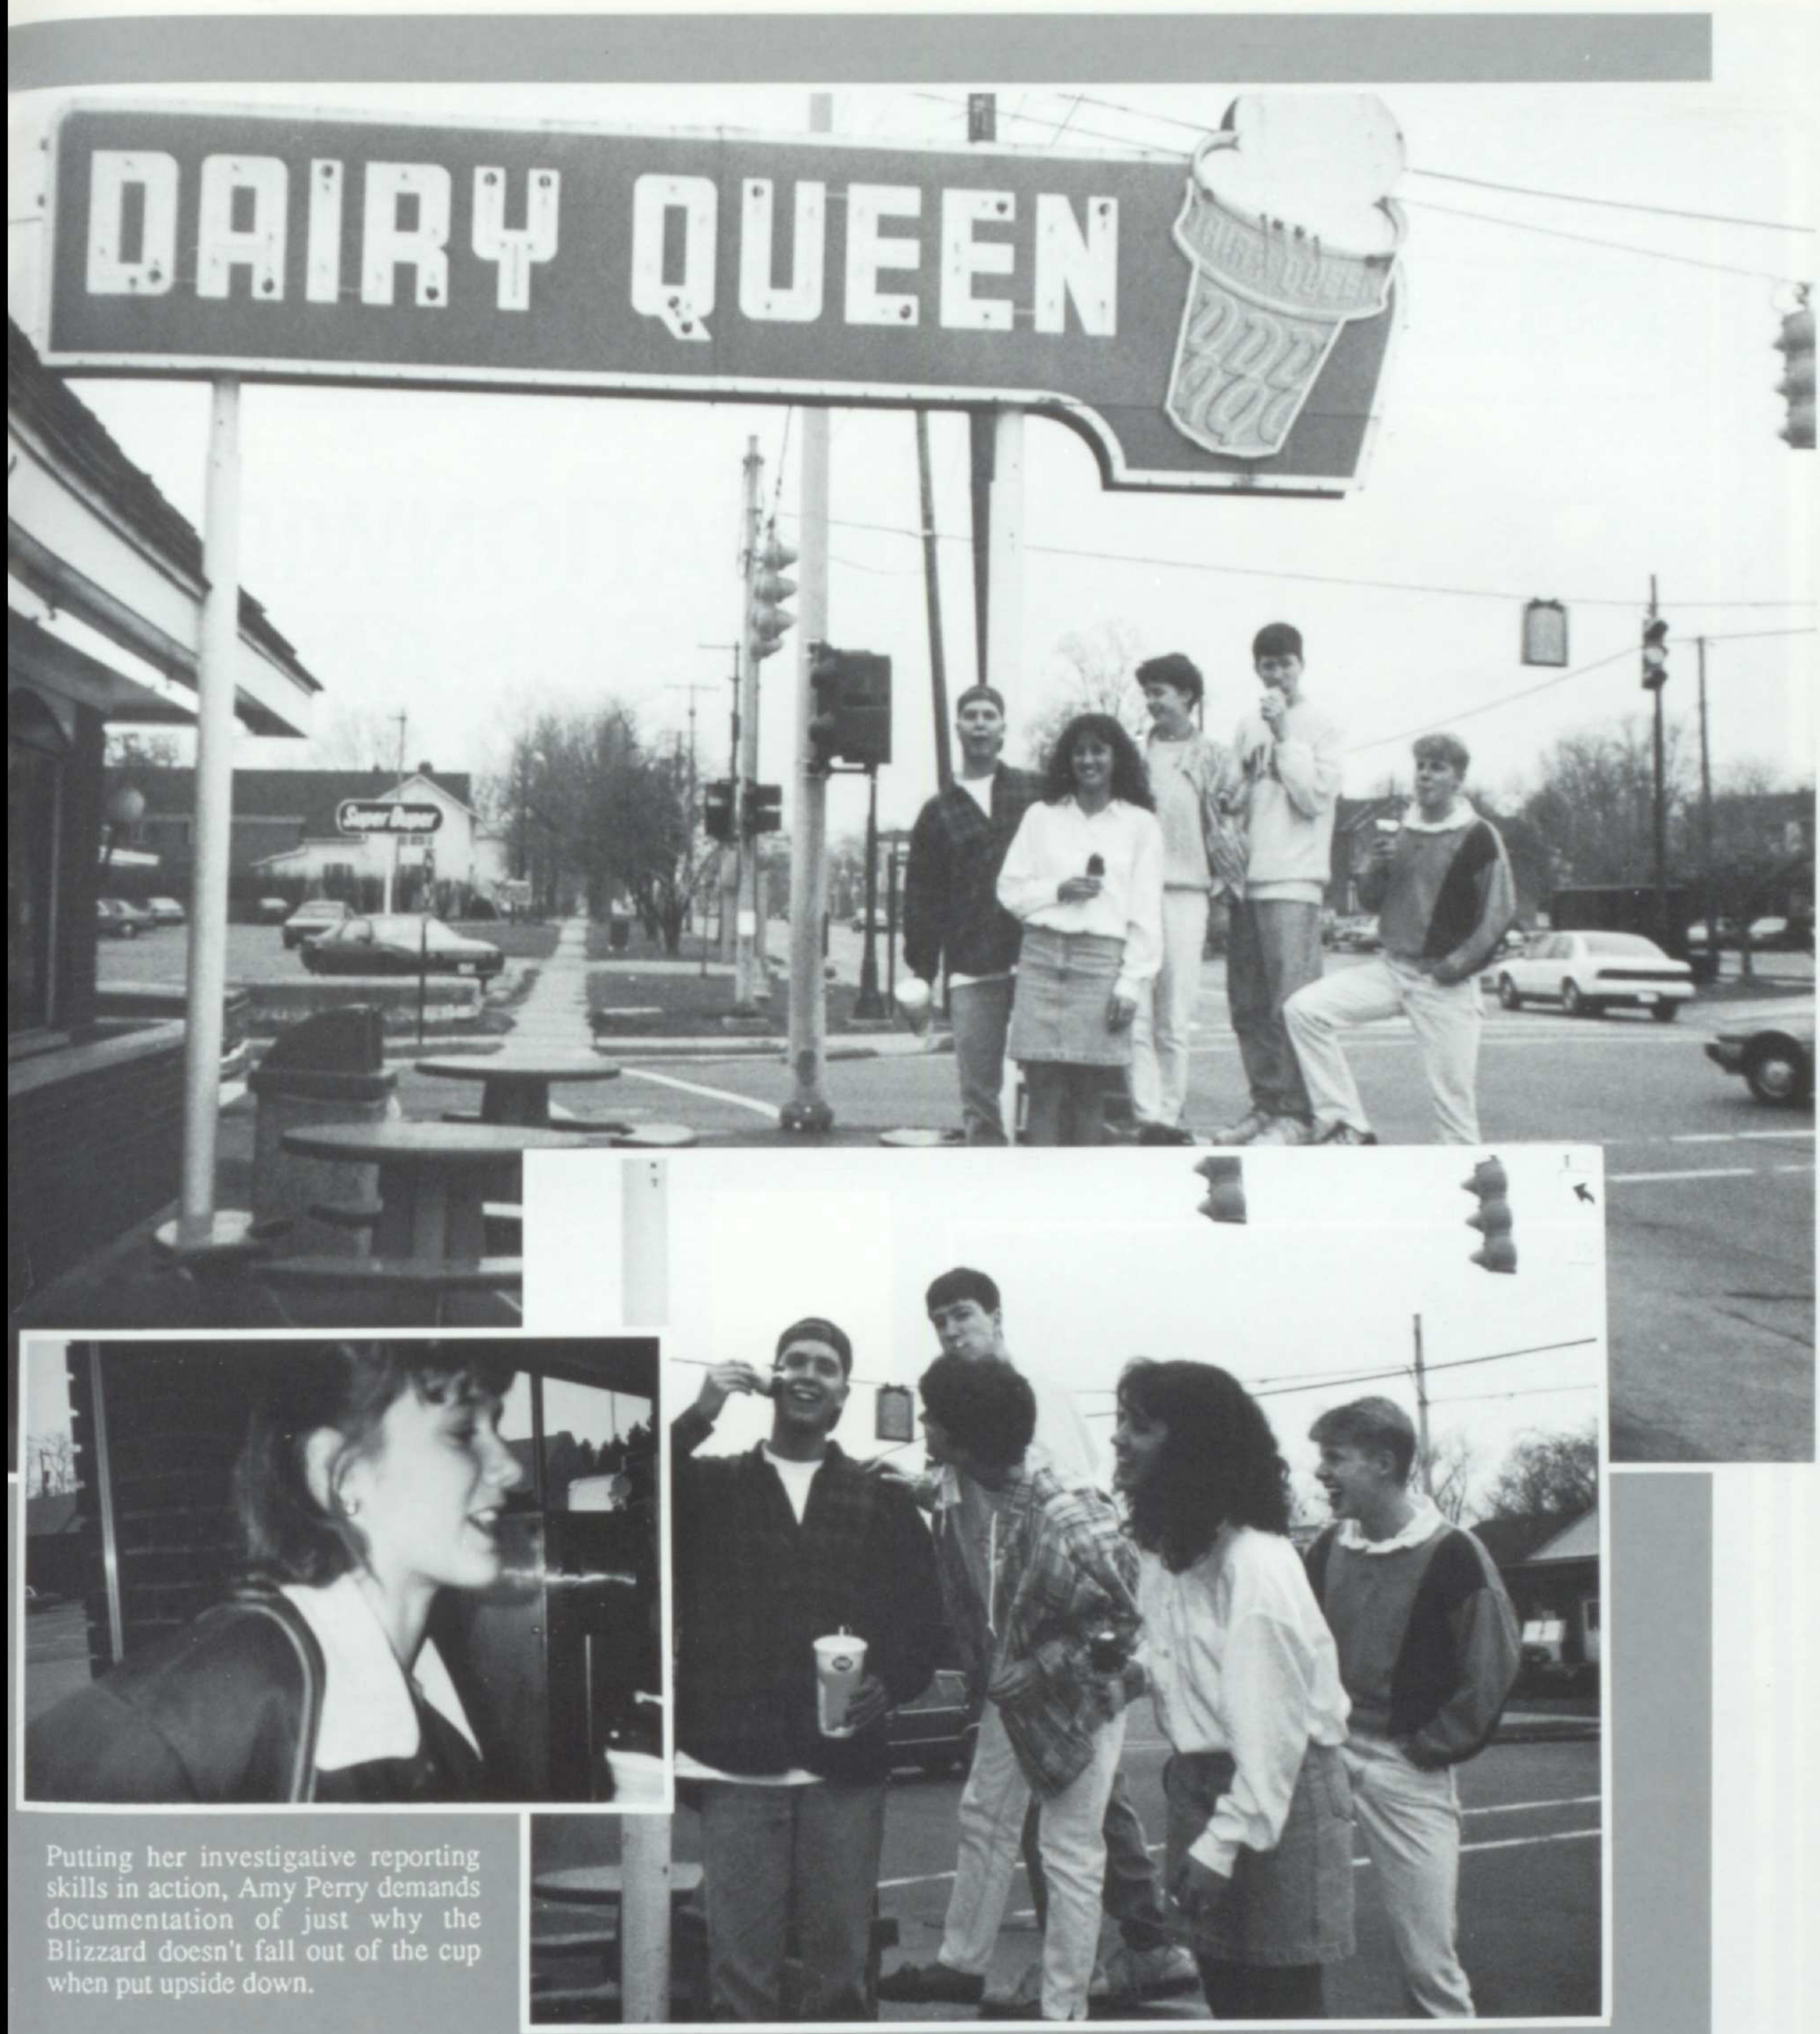
Selling Point

One day, this happy-go-lucky bunch, Todd Bracken, Alison Owen, Davy Milroy, Pam Beim, and Eric Chivington, embarked on a mission armed with Mrs. Fish's money. Their mission? To buy ice cream, of course. And where does one go when one wants the best ice cream in town? Why, to Dairy Queen, of course! Dairy Queen is a faithful sponsor of our own Cardinal yearbook. What a coincidence!

Exhausted after the grueling two block journey, Bracken collapsed and was revived only when presented with a soothing shake.





Putting her investigative reporting skills in action, Amy Perry demands documentation of just why the Blizzard doesn't fall out of the cup when put upside down.

Soon, Bracken had fully recovered and was even up to doing silly tricks with his ice cream, upstaging Davy Milroy's classic ice cream-on-lip routine. Bracken performed his own version, ice cream-all-over cheek, much to the delight of Eric Chivington and Pam Beim.

The Temporary School

After visiting her grandma, Brandi Binau wears the wrong glasses back to school.

Coming down from flight, Christy Lanning almost lands on her friends, Mackenzie Bryant and Alice Lyday.

Compiled by Meghan McCarthy

Disgusted with society's sexist tendencies, these bathing beauties protest by saying, "Hey, if girls have to wear bikini tops, then dang it all, we will too!"

Feeling a sudden numbing chill, Cindy Johnston nuzzles up to Emily Geizer, who says, "Come Cindy, I'll be your shelter. I'll be the one to shelter you from all the pain."

"Hey, I'm on to you. That's a camera and you're going to take my picture, aren't you?" deduces wise scholar-athlete Susan Castner.

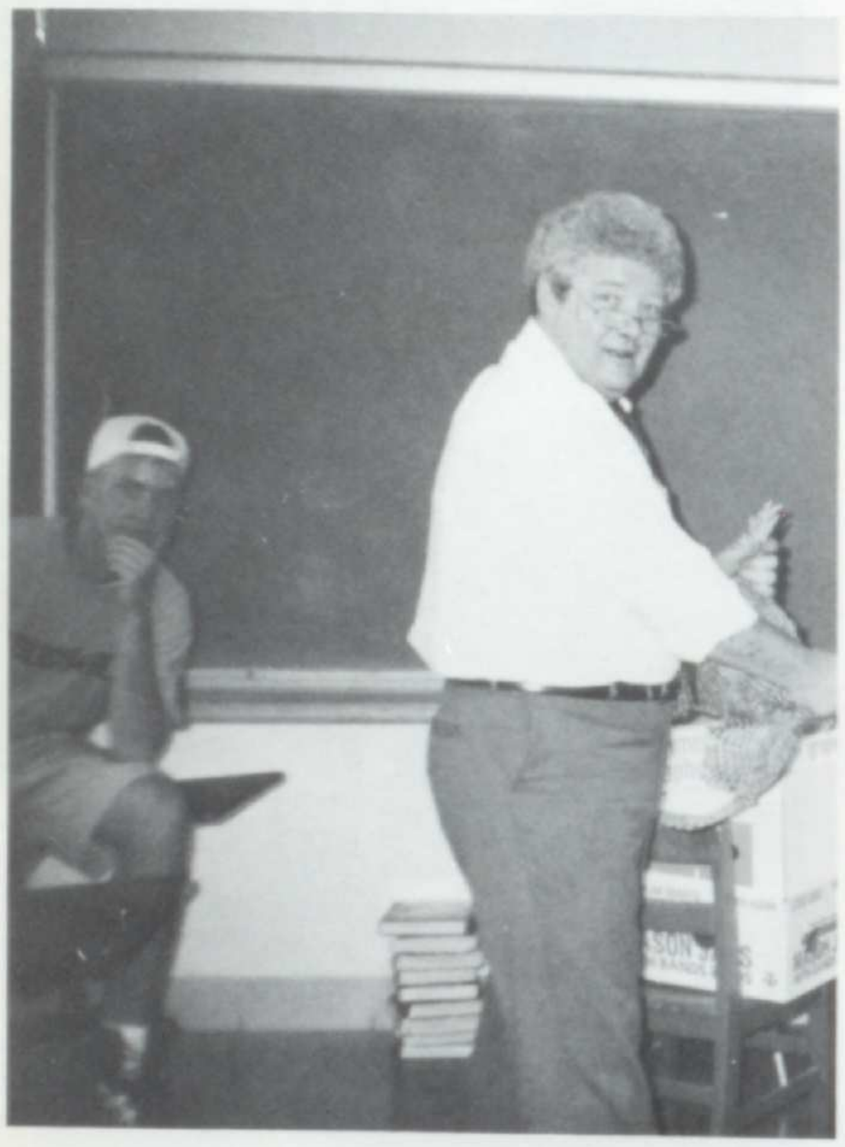
Someday the mountain might get Chris Torrens, but the law never will. Yeeeeeeeeee Haaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaawwwwwwwwww!!!!!!!

After hearing that the European Economic Community is finally becoming a reality, maintaining composure is an impossibility for this vocal crowd.

She's a model; he's an artist. Together they are Michelle Garrison and Jeremy Rendina, one wacky duo that will steal your heart.

Preferring to let their artwork speak for them, Shin O'Hara and Yoshiko Nikawa turn their backs to the camera.

Not only do they have the same initials, but Jenny Kohler and Jason Kurtz share the world's largest collection of Menudo albums



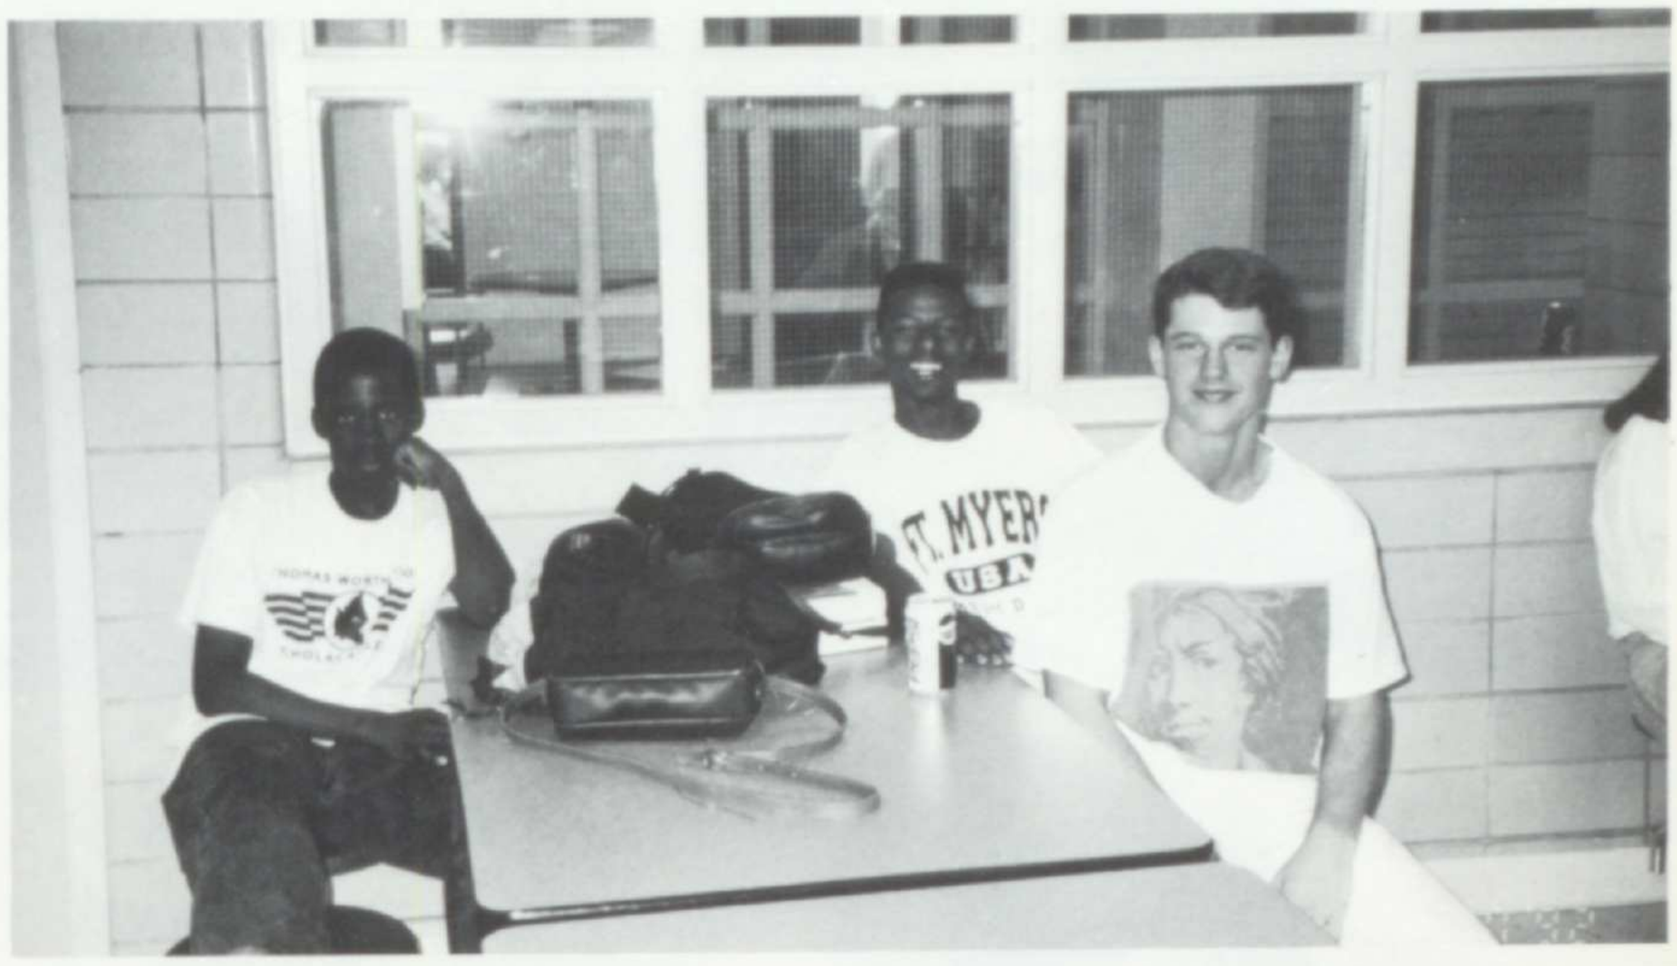
Could mishievous Todd Bracken be considering whether or not to tell Mr. Butler where this lunatic chicken came from?

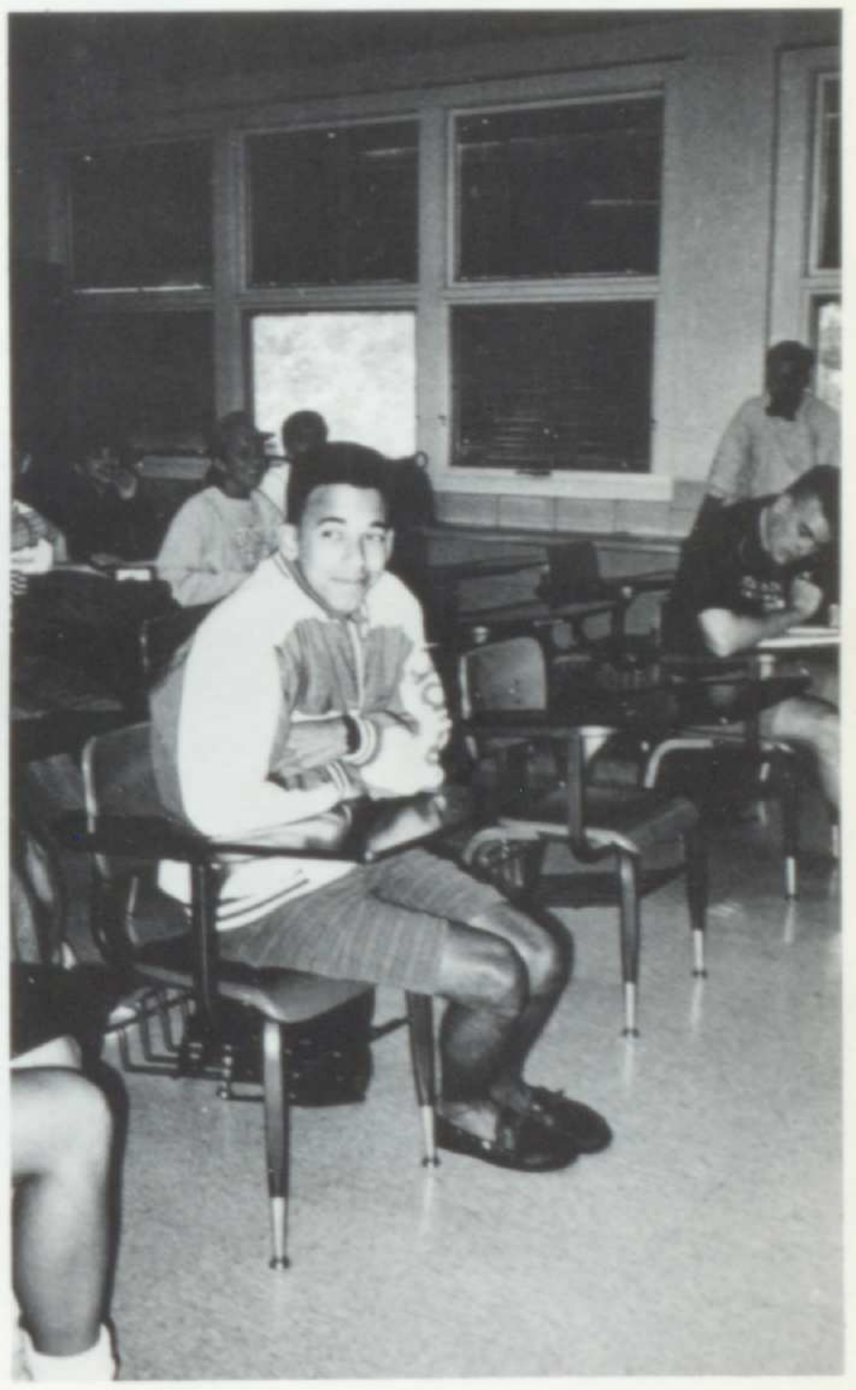
The not-so-crowded music wing halls enable students to partake in a bit of duck duck goose before returning to class.(I.D. 's still required)

Hey Matt Minister, we know you're failing physics, but that's no reason to be downright grumpy! Look at Ryan Pirnat and Andy Belknap, they're failing physics too, but they still manage to smile.

This is Leo Tungaraza, Tes Menghs, and Chris Robinson sitting at a table in the cafeteria. Tes is smiling. Leo has his elbow on the table. There's some stuff on the table too.

Well hey, if it isn't Mike Marlo Thomas and Chris Ross Perot coming up the hallway. Stop fellas, and smile real big and pretty for us. That's reeeeeeaaaaaaaal nice, fellas! Real Nice!!!





Wouldn't it be nice if we were all as sure of ourselves as Standford-bound Kevin Boyle is? So full of promise. We salute thee, Kevin Boyle!

I'm sorry Stephanie Young, but Margo McClimans is clearly taller than you are. Next time double check your claims before calling a yearbook staffer to the scene.

Why is Eric Sears nuzzling with Courtney McKnight? Could it be her perfume? No, he probably just needs money.

And so we draw to a close another yearbook chock full of cheesey captions and misspelled names. Another volume to be shelved until that dark night when you're feeling nostalgic. Then you'll drag it out, laugh a bit, cry a bit, and ask yourself, "Who's responsible for this?"
